ANGRY MEN out of work marched on the Legislative Buildings Tuesday demanding to see Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, both of whom were out of town. The more than 200 demonstrators were made up mainly of laid-off and locked-out tradesmen and mill workers from the Cowichan Valley and were joined by about 15 striking tugboat workers from Victoria. Jordan War Intensifies

Rebels Ignore Truce

Times News Services

The Arab guerrilla revolt against the Jordanian government continued to rage in the streets of Amman, the capital, today despite an announced ceasefire pact reached between King Hussein and rebel leader Yasir Arafat, head of the commandos' supreme council.

A dispatch received in Washington just before noon said all telephone and electric power service has failed in the Jordanian capital, and gunfire in the streets has made it impossible to remain outside.

Guerrilla sources in Lebanon said the government troops, some of which had been pulled back from the Jordan River-Israel front to deal with the insurrection, were shelling all areas inhabited by Palestinian Arabs, including refugee camps.

The Arab revolt, which exploded into open warfare Tuesday, is being led by guerrilla extremists who seek a more aggressive stance by Jordan against Israel.

A spokesman of Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla organization in the Middle East, said in Beirut that there had been scores of casualties, including women and children, in the bombardment of one camp that is the site of the headquarters of the radical popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Observers in Lebanon said it seemed that the situation was deteriorating into an all-out fight between extremist elements on both sides, with the moderates, represented by the king and Arafat,

U.S. ATTACHE SLAIN BY ARAB GUERRILLAS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) — Palestinian Arab guerrillas burst into the home of the U.S. military attache in Amman, Jordan, Maj. Robert P. Perry, today and killed him with a burst of automatic fire, travellers reaching Beirut said.

The travellers had their information from American sources at the American embassy, which was itself under sniper fire today.

Towboat Men Vote on Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Some 400 west coast towboats and their 1,150 officers and engineers could be back at work early next week if a contract settlement endorsed by union negotiators is accepted by the membership.

Result of voting by the members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild on the offer, reported to be 26 per cent over 2½ years, is expected by Friday night.

Federal mediator William Kelly said the settlement will bring about "major improvements in the working conditions of the towboat men."

"It will drastically reduce the hours of duty required of the masters and officers which have been bitterly complained about."

Provision of a minimum six-man crew on all large, continuously-operating tugs, which at one time was a main union demand, is believed not included in the offer.

DISPUTE HEARD

Meanwhile, a conciliation board is hearing a dispute between the British Columbia Towboat Owners Association, which represents 53 companies, and the Seafarers International Union which has 250 members working on the tugs.

The association said Tuesday, however, that the SIU "generally goes along with what the guild gets." Current guild pay rates range from $583 a month for the mate of a small tug to $980 for the captain of a large one.

Increases for these categories will range from $170 a month to $268. New regulations, covering most of the bitterly-fought safety issues including design and construction of the boats, accommodation and work practices, are to be announced in the Commons today by Transport Minister Don Jamieson.

In another development, an appeal was launched Tuesday against the six-month jail sentence imposed on chief guild negotiator Capt. Arnie Davis last Thursday for contempt of a B.C. supreme court injunction banning picketing.

The appeal claimed that the contempt order didn't state whether proceedings were criminal or civil, didn't disclose whether any rules applied to the proceedings and that it was made ex parte, in the absence of Capt. Davis.

20,000 JOBLESS

The strike which started May 3 has thrown out of work 20,000 men in the forest industry, either through layoffs because of lack of raw materials usually handled by tugs, or because they refuse to cross towboat picket lines.

It followed nine months of negotiations and rejection of a 21 per cent pay increase over three years. A secret DOT report leaked to the press by the guild stated 80 per cent of

NORTH VIETS CAPTURE KEY TOWN

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — North Vietnamese troops have occupied the last major government-controlled town in southern Laos, informed sources said today.

They said the North Vietnamese captured the key town of Saravane Tuesday.

Showdown Vote Set Over War

Times News Services

The U.S. Senate today is preparing for a showdown vote Thursday on a Nixon-backed resolution which would allow President Nixon, without approval of the U.S. Congress, to send troops back into Cambodia after the July 1 deadline.

A close vote is expected and the administration believes it has the support to pass the resolution.

Sens. Mike Mansfield (D — Mont.), Frank Church (D — Idaho) and John Sherman Cooper (R — Ky.) called the administration-backed move the equivalent of a new "Gulf of Tonkin Resolution" which would allow the president to take any war action in Cambodia he wishes and would nullify the Cooper-Church amendment. The latter denies funds for further U.S. operations in Cambodia after July 1 without the prior consent of Congress.

On the war front, Cambodian troops pushed back North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops from around the provincial capital of Siem Reap, 185 miles northwest of Phnom Penh.

Only Food Vouchers Granted Jobless

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi has decided to grant limited assistance — food vouchers — to families made destitute by labor disputes.

The announcement that directives had been sent to welfare offices on Tuesday morning was made by deputy minister E. R. Rickinson Tuesday afternoon to leaders of more than 200 jobless men from Cowichan Valley protesting in front of the Legislative Buildings.

To qualify for the vouchers, idled workers will have to prove they are destitute and that they are ineligible for unemployment insurance, register with the federal manpower department to show there is no job for them and fill in the usual application forms for social assistance.

Rickinson stressed that only food vouchers will be issued, not cash, as is the case for most welfare recipients.

Rickinson also informed demonstration leaders, which included Robert Strachan, MLA for Cowichan-Malahat, that Gaglardi, who was out of town, would meet them Thursday at 1:30 p.m.

One of the organizers of the demonstration, Fermie Viala, vice-president of the Duncan local of the International Woodworkers of America, said they would press for full welfare assistance for workers laid-off or locked out in labor disputes.

SECOND-CLASS CITIZENS

"We want to be eligible for welfare as any other destitute person. To give us vouchers for food only, while others get welfare cheques, makes us second-class citizens," Viala said.

Viala said that he and leaders of the Carpenters Union and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada would also try to meet Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Thursday afternoon to protest B.C.'s labor laws. Peterson was out of town Tuesday afternoon.

When Viala and Strachan informed the demonstrators of the food voucher announcement, several voiced unhappiness that the protest had accomplished so little.

BETTER DO SOMETHING

"There better be a lot of cheques ready tomorrow," yelled another.

"Bring the parasites (Gaglardi and Peterson) out," demanded another.

Under the urging of the leaders, the demonstrators, still muttering, gradually broke up.

The demonstration began as a motorcade from Duncan. It stopped briefly at the Ocean Cement plant at Bamberton where Strachan met company officials and failed to persuade them to end their ban on cement sales throughout the province.

CARRY PLACARDS

PROTEST JAILING

Strachan told the demonstrators they were there to protest the jailing of Capt. Arnie Davis, chief negotiator for the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, to urge humane labor laws to get the correct interpretation and use of welfare legislation and "to focus attention on the current social crisis" created by the labor disputes.

OIL LEAK FEARED WATERFOWL THREAT

EDMONTON (CP) — Oil from a broken pipeline at Fort McMurray could cause "considerable damage" to waterfowl 150 miles downstream on the Athabasca River, an Alberta government official said today.

Particles of oil from the pipeline break were believed by officials to be entering the Athabasca Delta where the river flows into Lake Athabasca.

"It doesn't look good," said Al Boggs, district officer with the fish and wildlife division at Fort McMurray, 230 miles north of Edmonton. "Considerable damage could be done to waterfowl."

250 Young People Take Over Hotel

SASKATOON (CP) — Between 250 and 300 young people took control of the downtown Bessborough Hotel Tuesday night and served themselves beer after management closed off the taps.

It was the second demonstration at the publicly-owned Canadian National Railways hotel this week.

The demonstrators, protesting the hotel's new rulings on appearance and dress, stood on tables, taunted police and tore windows from their hinges in the barroom.

City police and RCMP were on hand but made no arrests. A police spokesman said no police action could be taken unless requested by the management.

Shortly after the young people marched on the hotel—about 8 p.m. CST — George McCabe, hotel manager, ordered the bar shut down. But the crowd, which overflowed into the lobby, helped themselves to pickled eggs, opened the beer taps and formed a beer line.

At one point a loud speaker was brought in and was used to shout insults at the hotel management.

The demonstrators left at 11:30 p.m. promising to return for a "sleep-in" tonight.

Monday night about 200 young people invaded the beverage room and the liquor lounge after some persons were ejected for not conforming to dress regulations.

N.Y. Police Station Bombed

NEW YORK (AP) — Seventeen minutes after an anonymous caller telephoned a bomb threat, a powerful dynamite blast ripped through the second floor of police headquarters Tuesday night.

Eight persons were injured, none seriously.

LITTLE ROOM FOR COMPROMISE IN POST TALKS

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Treasury board and postal union negotiators postponed today's scheduled bargaining meeting, saying they need more time to prepare their positions.

Spokesmen for both sides said the delay was mutually agreed on and they will meet at 10:30 a.m. Thursday rather than today. Meantime, both sides will caucus separately to prepare future bargaining strategy.

During Tuesday, when both parties met face-to-face for 2½ hours, it became clear that the government's program of wage restraint leaves treasury board and the unions with little room for a compromise.

In Toronto, 2,669 postal employees were back on the job after striking the post office Tuesday. Workers in Windsor, Ont., joined the return to work after staying home Tuesday for the 11th day after a one-day return on Monday.

Postmen held a meeting Monday with William Dodge, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, to discuss the federal government's 6 per cent boost guidelines. Further talks are planned.

PQ Member Takes Seat

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — The only Parti Quebecois candidate elected during the April 29 Quebec general election who took the required oath of allegiance to the Queen today took his seat on the opposition side of the National Assembly chamber.

Charles Tremblay promptly asked Premier Robert Bourassa how long his fellow Parti Quebecois members would have to remain outside the assembly and was told that a committee had been formed to hear the party's case once debate on the inaugural address has ended.

'MUST LOWER EXCESSIVE COSTS'

Basford Vows Drug Action

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford hinted today at direct federal intervention to bring down retail drug prices if co-operative efforts with the provinces fail to work.

"However unpleasant it might be to intervene more directly in the market place, it may prove necessary, in order to meet the paramount objective—lowering of excessive costs," he said.

"Needless to say, it would be preferable to cure the ills of the market place through voluntary co-operation, imaginative streamlining of techniques and broad competitive forces."

Mr. Basford made the statements at a closed meeting of federal and provincial government officials. A text of his statement was distributed outside the meeting.

"I am convinced that the level of prices for prescription drugs is too high," he said in reporting on a just-concluded survey in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

BASFORD
. . . down or else

Mr. Basford said the survey of 19 commonly prescribed drugs at 10 drugstores in each city shows "that more competitive practices could lead to significant reductions in prices."

He said the consumer affairs department will maintain close scrutiny over price movements through industry price lists as well as through existing statistical indexes.

Mr. Basford told the meeting that recent steps to weaken patent protection enjoyed by some drugs had resulted in remarkable results in lowering drug prices.

The federal patent commissioner had issued licences to im-

Trudeau Aide Leads Exodus

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Gordon Gibson, of Vancouver, executive assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau, is at the head of a parade of several executive assistants, special assistants and other staff people planning to leave the government service this summer.

The departures — 10 in number according to latest count — have given rise to rumors that there is some unhappiness behind the scenes in the executive suites on Parliament Hill.

The rumors reached the floor of the Commons Tuesday when G. W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) asked: "Would the prime minister make a statement in connection with the alleged resignation of seven ministerial assistants because of the autocratic rule of the prime minister?"

Opposition members banged their desks in applause. Last year Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield's office who decided they had served long enough on Parliament Hill and resigned to take other posts in private business.

At the time the Liberals asked questions in the House about "trouble" in the opposition leaders' office.

In addition to Gibson, who has told many people in Ottawa that he plans to leave the prime minister's staff this summer, James Wightman of the prime minister's press office, is understood to be planning a move.

Both Gibson and Wightman have been with the prime minister since he was elected to that office. Wightman served as a press officer with former prime minister L. B. Pearson.

Among the executive assistants and special assistants planning to leave this summer are Robert McDowell, special assistant to services and supply minister James Richardson of Winnipeg; Tom Brett, executive assistant to government leader in the Senate, Paul Martin; Richard Hayes, executive assistant to Justice Minister John Turner; Blair William and Michael Barry, assistants to Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson; and Robert Wong, special assistant to Health and Welfare Minister John Munro.

One such drug, diazepam, a tranquillizer, now was being quoted at a suggested retail price 30 per cent below a competitor.

He said he is told that for another tranquillizer, chlordiazepoxide, a similar sharp reduction took place. One drug industry estimate was that hospitals and governments would be saved $950,000 a year as a result of price competition in this drug alone.

Mr. Basford said the federal government's role in dealing with the high cost of retail drug distribution is mainly that of a catalyst.

But, if any part of the federal program "fails to measure up to expectations, either through inadequacy or lack of support, other steps must be contemplated."

He followed this remark with a reference to direct intervention. He said the federal combines investigation branch has a role in maintaining competitive practices. The consumers branch would facilitate competition by informing consumers.

"It is our intention to foster the greatest possible degree of competition consistent with the highest standards of health care and physical safety."

Japanese Smelter Proposal Seen

Mines Minister Frank Richter expects Japanese interests to propose a copper smelter for B.C. within two months but he isn't sure it will meet the province's pollution control standards.

Interviewed on his return from Japan, Richter said he received inquiries about establishment of a smelter from a Japanese consortium.

"The question of pollution control may be a very substantial factor on which a decision will finally be made," he said, adding that a meeting here with the Japanese interests may take place before long.

POLLUTION FACTOR

Premier Bennett said last week that the province is still seeking establishment of a smelter but will only approve one if pollution standards are met.

Richter, who stayed over in Japan after attending Osaka '70 ceremonies with Bennett, was asked about rumors of new oil drilling applications in Georgia Strait.

No applications have been received from any company, he said, suggesting the oil industry is "looking for safer bets" right now.

DAVIS WARNING

He said the warning by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis that Ottawa will not allow drilling in the strait does not appear to have been a major factor in the lack of interest by oil companies.

Drilling in coastal waters generally as well as the strait appears to be "a dead issue" right now, he said.

Europe Trip Follows Retirement

After 46 years in the newspaper business, compositor William Mason, 2369 Musgrave in Oak Bay, has retired.

He left Tuesday on a six-week vacation in Europe with his wife, Nora.

He started work as a reporter with the Colonist at the age of 17, earning the princely sum of $15 a week.

Better pay in the printing department made Mason decide on a change. After completing his apprenticeship, he left in 1932 to travel in the United States.

After a stint in the printing shop of the Detroit Times, he returned to Victoria, in 1928, signing on with the Victoria Times.

When the Times and the Colonist amalgamated in 1951, becoming Victoria Press Ltd., Mason remained on staff, working with both papers.

He was presented with a camera by his fellow workers.

THE WEATHER

There will be sunshine for Victorians Thursday.

The weather office at Victoria International Airport also forecast southwesterly winds at 15 m.p.h. or less.

Temperatures are expected to reach an overnight low of 45 with a high of 62 Thursday. But they may reach 65 or 70 in areas protected from the wind.

Driver Jailed, Cabbie Hurt in Flaming Crash

Bruce Lief Erikson, 26, of Vancouver, was sentenced to 14 days in prison and had his licence suspended for a year in provincial court this morning.

Erikson was charged with dangerous driving Tuesday night following a flaming two-car collision at the intersection of Quadra and Fort at 11:30 p.m.

Eriskon pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler on the Criminal Code charge. He admitted to police after the crash that he ran a red light while travelling up Fort Street at about 45 miles per hour.

HIT HYDRANT

His car was in collision with a taxi, and after impact the vehicles spun across the intersection, bending a steel traffic signal post and shearing off a fire hydrant.

The taxi burst into flames immediately after the collision, but quick work by passers-by got victims out of the wreckage and around a corner, away from the flames.

Eleanor Kairez, 19, of 3335 Midland, Oak Bay, a passenger in Baker's taxi, was treated for leg cuts and released from Royal Jubilee Hospital.

An unidentified passenger in Erikson's car was unhurt.

'BEAT LIGHT'

Police reported Erikson told them he knew the light was red but that he though "he could beat the light and the other car."

"That sort of horsing around can lead to a person's death," Ostler told Erikson before passing sentence.

City police were assisted by two fire trucks, two ambulances and city waterworks and engineers staff.

unable to enforce obedience o the ceasefire.

The Popular Front said, meanwhile, it would not be responsible for the lives of 32 foreigners, held hostage in an Amman hotel, if there were further attacks on refugee camps.

A spokesman for the front said earlier that the hostages were in no danger.

Amman radio said that joint Palestinian-Jordanian patrols were moving therough the streets of Amman to enforce the case-fire. But there was no confirmation of this from the commando side.

A Popular Front spokesman said in Beurut that the organization rejects compromise solutions and unclear promises and demands implementation of a four-point program that includes dismissal from the positions of authority of all anti-commando elements and release of all commandoes from detention.

IGNORE CEASEFIRE

All day Amman radio broadcast an announcement of a ceasefire agreement concluded by King Hussein and Arafat in early-morning talks at the royal palace attended by a powerful Iraqi delegation.

But the ceasefire call was ignored, as were repeated radio appeals for calm and a return to normal.

An American staff in Amman has bee

An American staff memoer of the U.S. embassy in Amman has been killed in the fighting, the state department reported today.

A spokesman said that reports from witnesses indicate that "he was caught in a crossfire in his home."

Press officer John King told a news conference the man's identification was being withheld until his family in the United States had been notified.

King said he understands that the man's immediate family — wife and children — were with him when he was shot.

The NDP member said that Davis was jailed six months for what the courts had decided was secondary picketing. But, he said, the manager of Ocean Cement that morning had admitted to him in essence that they were doing a secondary boycott.

"While labor is penalized by the courts for secondary picketing, management is allowed to get away with the same thing without hindrance.

"I don't see anybody throwing Gaglardi in jail for breaking the law of the land," Strachan said, referring to the welfare minister's refusals to grant welfare to locked-out and laid-off workers.

In another long-standing dispute, the Construction Labor Relations Association said Tuesday night it will appeal a court decision which denied it an injunction killing a contract signed by a member firm with the plumbers union.

Atlas Installations Ltd. signed a contract after the CLRA locked out the plumbers and eight other construction unions in April, while a 10th union struck. More than 10,000 workers have been idled.

NO BARGAINING

The company said it signed on its own because there was no "true collective bargaining" between the 630-member CLRA and the unions and Atlas was threatened with bankruptcy.

Two hotels whose waitresses and bartenders struck Monday continuted to operate with non-union labor crossing picket lines. Forty-five other hotels in the Lower Mainland and Fraser Valley, excluding Vancouver, have served lockout notice effective 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

Festival Reports $500 Profit

The Greater Victoria Music Festival ended up $500 in the black after spending $9,916 in 1970, the treasurer reported to the annual meeting of the festival association Tuesday.

And it will begin its new year with $1,249 in the bank compared with just $777 a year ago.

It had been a good year but "we must not relax our efforts or be over optimistic" warned Walter Kitley in his presidential report.

He told the well-attended meeting at the Conservatory of Music that cost of running the festival would inevitably rise in 1971 with the necessity of bringing in more adjudicators to cope with big classes and rental of additional halls.

ELECTED

The following executive and board of directors was elected for the ensuing year.

Mrs. William Ellis, honorary president; Walter Kitley, president; Mrs. V. Berringer, past president; Philip Kitley, vice-president; Mrs. Marjorie Kitley, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary Saich, recording secretary; Dr. J. F. K. English, treasurer; Mrs. Ada English, festival secretary.

'We Don't Talk About Politics'

What does she talk about with Pierre? Barbra Streisand pauses a moment, as if taking cue from mural behind her, during open house Tuesday at her New York apartment. When asked for political assessment of Prime Minister Trudeau, whom she has dated, she replied: "We don't talk about politics" Miss Streisand is promoting the candidacy of her lawyer friend, Bella Abzug, who is running for the U.S. Congress. Miss Streisand returned to New York from Ottawa Sunday.

Bourassa 'Strong' On Economic Plan

QUEBEC (CP) — Seven separatist members of the Quebec national assembly sat out the opening of the 29th Quebec legislature in the visitors' gallery Tuesday, while Premier Robert Bourassa promised "a young, modern, efficient administration."

Six members of the Parti Quebecois were refused entry into the chamber because they would not swear the oath of allegiance to the Queen. The seventh, who said he took the oath earlier by mistake, sat with his colleagues.

In his speech on the general policy of the Liberal government elected last April 29, Mr. Bourassa, 36, laid strong emphasis on economic matters. He repeated his campaign promises to get the economy back on its feet and create 100,000 new jobs by 1971.

He also pledged that French would be established as the province's working language, social inequalities eliminated, urban problems dealt with the education system improved.

While he outlined what the Liberals have in store for Quebec, about 150 employees of Quebec's private hospitals paraded in front of the legislature to emphasize their wage demands.

The Parti Quebecois, which won only seven seats with 23 per cent of the popular vote in the April election, insisted on swearing an oath of allegiance to the Quebec people instead of the monarch.

TO STUDY OATH

Mr. Bourassa said his government had done all in its power to accommodate the Parti Quebecois stand. It had agreed to set up a committee to study the oath.

Assembly secretary Rene Blondin said the British North America Act requires that assembly members swear allegiance to the Queen before they can sit in the house.

In his first speech to the national assembly as a government leader, Mr. Bourassa said constitutional reform, already begun, must be continued at a "more rapid" pace.

It was in the "double interest" of both Quebec and Canada that "our cultural personality finds its largest expression within the federal system."

The 36-year-old premier also repeated a promise to redraft the province's electoral map, which now favors rural ridings over the densely-populated urban centres.

The present map is disputed by the Parti Quebecois, which ran second only to the Liberals in popular vote but elected fewer members than the Union Nationale and the Creditistes.

Jean-Noel Lavoie, Liberal member from Laval, was unanimously elected speaker. Lt.-Gov. Hughes Lapointe read a bilingual, three-minute speech in which the government expressed its intention to give priority to Quebec's "immediate problems."

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette presented a bill that would grant an additional indemnity of $3,000 a year and supplementary allowance of $1,000 a year to each Opposition party leader with at least 12 members in the assembly or at least 20 per cent of the total vote in the previous election.

Price Index Decline Called 'Good News'

OTTAWA (CP) — Reversal of a sharp April increase in food prices brought the consumer price index down one-tenth of an index point last month to 129.6 from 129.7.

A finance department spokesman described the announcement by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics Tuesday as good news in all respects.

Not only did food prices decline but other sectors of the consumer price index behaved well — with the exception of housing — on a seasonally-adjusted basis computed by the finance department.

A member of the federal prices and incomes commission also said the index decline reflected some success in talking industry into holding prices down.

The commission now is getting regular reports from wholesalers and retailers showing their compliance with the yardstick of holding price increases below cost increases. Profit margins are being squeezed.

DBS reported that food prices declined nine-tenths of one per cent last month. They had risen eight-tenths of one per cent in April. The over-all index last month was 3.8 per cent higher than in May last year. This is the smallest 12-month increase since February, 1969.

But housing costs continued to rise last month, and were five per cent higher than a year earlier.

Officials describe this sector of the over-all index as the slowest one to react to lowered costs. High interest rates on mortgages are quickly reflected in new house prices, but lower rates are slow in moving the index down.

Canada Not Crumbling, Says Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday he does not believe Canada is breaking up as certain regional movements in Quebec and the West might indicate.

"I do not have the impression of living in a country which is in the process of crumbling," he said on the French-language CBC television program Format 60.

He said Canadian unity has been strengthened in the nearly two years since his government won the July, 1968 general election.

The April 29 Quebec election which swept Liberal Robert Bourassa to power, the Liberal prime minister said, showed Quebecers still want national unity.

Asked by a reporter to interpret the vote for the separatist Parti Quebecois, second to the Liberals with 23 per cent throughout the province and almost 50 per cent in the Montreal region, Mr. Trudeau said it still had not been made clear to Quebecers that they could live better within Confederation.

He said people in the rest of Canada have a better understanding of Quebecers. Bilingualism would progress more "if the governments of Quebec believed in it more."

The Silent Six

THE REFUSAL of six Parti Quebecois members-elect to take the customary oath of allegiance to the Queen has confronted Quebec's new Premier Bourassa with his first major procedural problem. It is not as trivial as some observers might claim, for quite apart from the matter of sentiment for the sovereign which is entailed in the problem, is the question of constitutional amendment.

Swearing allegiance to the Queen is a house rule of the Quebec Assembly, and as such, might be readily altered. But it is also part of the BNA Act, and therefore cannot be ignored or easily changed. The six recalcitrant members have rightly been refused seats in the Quebec Assembly, for even though they have been elected they have not complied with a necessary requirement of membership. Mere lack of desire to conform is not sufficient reason for ignoring the Canadian constitution, and the incident takes on added importance in view of the separatist element in Quebec and the symbolic importance which many Quebecois will attach to the required oath.

In Section 128 of the BNA Act it is stated that "every Member of ... a Legislative Council or Legislative Assembly of any Province shall before taking his seat therein take and subscribe before the Lieutenant Governor of the Province or some person authorized by him, the Oath of Allegiance contained in the Fifth Schedule to this Act ..."

On this basis it is obviously not within the power of Quebec or any other province to ignore the provision, for it has equal weight with any other section of the Act. The BNA Act can be amended only by agreement of the federal government and all the provinces, who would then authorize the House of Commons and the Senate to request the Parliament of Britain to make the change. The BNA Act is still an act of Britain's Parliament, for all attempts to make the constitution a legislative act of Canada have failed through lack of agreement in this country as to how it should be done. The Parliament at Westminster would no doubt be delighted to get rid of the responsibility it still has, but it could do so only through Canadian action.

Mr. Bourassa's dilemma, of course, is that even despite his recent overwhelming victory over the separatists at the polls, he must appear as a leader determined to preserve the culture and entity of Quebec. Too enthusiastic a show of support for oaths of allegiance to the Queen could make his domestic path much more difficult. And further difficulties are something Mr. Bourassa does not need.

What happens to the six Parti Quebecois members, now relegated to the spectator's section of the Assembly, may become a major issue in Quebec. But a great deal of Quebec's cultural and racial safety resides in the BNA Act. French Canada cannot afford to see the Act flouted, even to accommodate six separatists. And until it is legally changed, the Queen's writ must run.

The Problem of Arctic Defence

THE QUESTION OF HOW TO defend the Canadian Arctic will probably be one of the most difficult and expensive defence problems in this decade. Last week the defence subcommittee on maritime forces suggested a three-point maritime defence consisting of satellite surveillance, nuclear submarines equipped with conventional weapons, and sea-bottom sonor. All these measures would be backed up by a force of long-range surveillance aircraft.

In a key phrase the subcommittee recommended that Canada do the job itself, rather than in cooperation with other countries, because of the Arctic sovereignty issue. Doing it ourselves will mean paying for it ourselves. The going rate for nuclear submarines and long-range surveillance aircraft — even if such a buying binge were phased over three years — would leave us with small change from our current $1.8 billions annual defence budget.

Perhaps, as the subcommittee suggests, the defence department may be able to purchase used nuclear submarines from the United States as they are phased out. But replacing the obsolescent Argus surveillance aircraft would cost about $300 millions alone. While the subcommittee's recommendations for Arctic defence hardware may be minimal, considering the more than 1.5 million square miles of Canadian Arctic, the drain on other Canadian military budgets would be intolerable under present defence spending.

The public lacks answers to two questions: Is there a present and foreseeable military threat to the Canadian Arctic and, if so, would the small Canadian force ultimately deployed in the Arctic be able to contain the threat? In this nuclear era, a nation of small population sandwiched between two hostile giants has few military alternatives. Our chief objective at this time should be establishment of an adequate physical presence to assert practical sovereignty rather than preparation for a theoretical war.

The Violent Mideast Refugee Problem

INTERNECINE FIGHTING BEtween Arab guerrillas and the duly constituted government of Jordan in the streets of Amman comes as no surprise. Nearly 700,000 Palestinian refugees who once lived in territory now controlled by Israel make up half the Jordanian population. Close to 200,000 refugees live in and around the capital of Amman.

While Jordan is probably the most pro-western of Arab nations and has the government that is most inclined towards a negotiated settlement with Israel, the Palestinians are intractable foes of Israel and, by association, the Western nations. In recent months tension has mounted between Jordanians and Palestinians. Like her sister Arab states, Jordan has tried to stop guerrilla incursions into Israel — although vainly — because Israel swiftly retaliates against the nation from which the guerrilla attacks originate.

Despite 20 years of United Nations aid to the refugees, they still have nowhere to go and subsist in squalid camps around major Arab cities waiting to go home. After years of impatience many refugees have decided to accelerate the fight against Israel to regain their homes. They have even fought Jordanian government troops in trying to gain a free hand to pursue the anti-Israeli conflict.

Refugee philosophy, often Marxist in tone, has attracted many young Arabs and threatened the Lebanese and Jordanian governments. Until a negotiated settlement between Israel and the Arabs produces a solution to the refugee problem they will continue to be a thorn in Israel's side and a volatile element in Arab politics.

FROM QUEBEC — By RICHARD PURSER

Big Task for a Short, Hot Summer

HIGH expectations await the 29th session of the Quebec legislature, which opened Tuesday. The new government of young Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa is expected to, and indeed must, pull Quebec out of the stagnation and confusion in which it has wallowed since the death of Premier Daniel Johnson in 1968 plunged the province into a power vacuum.

Purser

Mr. Bourassa, a 36-year-old economist who faces his awesome task after only four years in politics and five months as leader of his party, plans to begin his certain four to five years as premier with a busy summer. The new session of the National Assembly, in which the Liberals hold 72 of the 108 seats, had been intended as a short one to clear up outstanding legislation and the more urgent aspects of the mess left behind by the departed National Union government.

But Mr. Bourassa's ministers, mostly in his own age group and working night and day since their appointments on May 12, have come up with about 20 major pieces of legislation that can't wait for a fall session. So the summer session is advertised to end about July 15, but with the debate on the inaugural speech, the budget due on June 18, a major debate expected on medicare, and an unprecedented situation in the opposition, few expect the members to be released from the stifling old parliament buildings before mid-August, even sitting four days a week, two of them from 10.30 a.m. to 10 p.m. and two from 10.30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Three-Party Opposition

The opposition situation is that it is made up of three parties instead of the usual one. Former Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand is leader of the official National Union Opposition consisting of the 17 survivors of the April 29 election holocaust. But Dr. Camille Laurin and his seven Parti Quebecois members, not yet seated because of their refusal to take the oath, and Camil Samson with his 12 Creditistes also have status as party leaders, which will add time to debates.

An early budget is necessary because the previous government failed to present one before calling the election — a gambit that the Liberals successfully presented as an effort to cover up Quebec's miserable financial plight. Ministers and officials have been working furiously to pare down waste expenses — they have found plenty of them — and present a budget with no tax increase.

Medicare promises to provide the biggest legislative debate of the session. The National Union had legislated to introduce it July 1, but left preparations for it in such total chaos as to be labelled "gross negligence" by Mr. Bourassa. The Liberal government will try to bring it about in workable form, but the Creditistes will attack it as socialistic and the Parti Quebecois will agitate to make it more so.

Work in Prospect

The government will try to get all its departmental budgets approved by the end of the session and to provide universal suffrage for all citizens — not just property owners — 18 and over in Montreal's important Oct. 25 civic elections. The new revenue minister, William Tetley, will seek to plug loopholes that cause the loss of millions of dollars of tax revenue yearly through fraud. Important legislation will be passed allowing the caisses populaires (credit unions) to invest in private industry. This will free $2 billion in savings hitherto confined to non-risk investments. And work will have to continue on Montreal school reorganization, a subject which created bitter English-French division under the previous government. At dissolution, the Assembly's education committee had tentatively decided to hold further hearings on the matter in Montreal. Earlier, processions of Montrealers had come here to present often bitterly-worded briefs on the National Union's proposed unified regional school boards, which would result in either English or French — usually English — being in a minority.

The legislative calendar will be a heavy one for Quebec's short, hot summer, and MNA's will undoubtedly sigh with relief every Friday evening as they exchange the steambath of parliament for the air-conditioned Rapido to Montreal, the new government's power base and weekend political fence-mending center for most Liberal members. But the new government knows it has to live up to its advance billing and prove its efficacy from the start, never mind the heat.

FROM WASHINGTON — By JAMES RESTON

Home Front Campaign

PRESIDENT Nixon made Cambodia sound so good on the TV the other night that it almost seems a pity to leave the place. "All our military objectives have been achieved," he said, and the whole adventure was "the most successful operation of this long and difficult war."

Reston

Well, maybe so, but the President has a way of making complicated and even disastrous things sound so simple and even triumphant that one wonders. His "interim report" on Cambodia was more like a lawyer's argument or even a TV commercial, complete with movies, than a Presidential statement on a major world event, but its political wallop should not be underestimated.

He was talking to a country that neither wants to pay the price of victory or defeat in Southeast Asia. It wants out without seeming to give up, and Nixon understands this yearning very well.

Accordingly, he passed over lightly the division in the country over the invasion, the weakness of the Cambodian Government, the extension of the war, the uproar about Cambodia in the Senate, and the military problem next spring after another 150,000 Americans come home.

He dealt primarily with the immediate problem and concentrated on the immediate military success. He had been criticized unmercifully, he said, for going into Cambodia, but the invasion was an unqualified success which crippled the enemy, demonstrated the growing confidence, skill and valor of the South Vietnamese, saved American lives, shortened the war, and reassured his time-table for bringing the boys back home.

Non-Arguable

Who wants to argue against all this—especially since it will take at least a year to estimate the strategic effects of the invasion? Nobody is in a position to question the President's figures on the captured enemy equipment. Nobody is against saving American lives, shortening the war, or bringing the U.S. expeditionary forces back home. The President's appeal for popular support came during the Senate debate on limiting his authority in Cambodia — and he timed the withdrawal of 50,000 more men from Vietnam for Oct. 15, just before the November Congressional elections.

His military strategy is not so clear, and it has obviously changed since he launched the invasion. Originally, he left the impression that once the Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia were destroyed, all U.S. military action in that country would cease. In his latest report, however, the President confirmed that while all U.S. ground troops would be withdrawn by July 1, he would insist on the right to go back in with "air missions to interdict the movement of enemy troops and material where I find this necessary to protect the lives and security of our forces in South Vietnam."

Aso, when the President ordered the invasion of Cambodia, he said at his May 8 news conference that he expected that the South Vietnamese troops would come out approximately at the same time (by July 1) "because when we come out, our logistical support and air support will also come out with them."

In his TV broadcast, however, Nixon put no limit on the South Vietnamese "activity in Cambodia in the future — after their withdrawal from the sanctuaries — (it) will be determined by the actions of the enemy." In other words, they would be free to act as they pleased against the enemy in Cambodia and be assured that American air power would at least bomb the North Vietnamese supply routes into that country.

It would be easy to be cynical about all this, but one should be very careful. The President has said publicly that he expected the violent reaction he got to the Cambodian invasion, but if our reports are even reasonably accurate, he was startled by the opposition both at home and abroad, and is now determined to speed up the withdrawal of American troops from the battlefield.

Negotiation Hope

No doubt he is still hoping that his bold and unexpected lunge into Cambodia will persuade the enemy to make a negotiated settlement. He almost pleaded with them in his broadcast to do so, and threatened them with the consequences if they didn't, offering them to choose between his hand and his fist, but there is no evidence here that they will accept his offer or be intimidated by his threats.

Accordingly, we can only guess at what he is doing in the face of this dilemma. The guess here is that, while he still hopes the North Vietnamese will compromise, and the South Vietnamese will be able to defend and unify their country on their own, he is determined to pull out, and is preparing the way to do so, regardless of what the North or the South Vietnamese do.

This is a very delicate operation. It involves proclaiming victory and condemning his critics, while pulling out as fast as he can. Peace and withdrawal were the main themes of his TV broadcast, and while they were blurred by his political manoeuvres, by his claims of victory and the glory of the South Vietnamese, it would probably be wise to wait and see whether he is not really following the policy of Sen. Aiken of claiming victory and coming home.

By Night

This is a letter of protest against something I don't think people know about. I didn't before Monday night last week.

My son is a towboat man and, of course, has been on picket duty.

Late Monday night, around 11:30 p.m., the house was in darkness and I was just about asleep when someone rang the doorbell. I called out to ask who it was as I was alone. A man asked for my son by name. I said he wasn't home. He asked when he would be and I said I didn't know. Eventually he found him and dumped some papers in his lap. Apparently it was a writ accusing him of contempt of court because he had gone back picketing after being served an injunction. The man would not identify himself but said he was a lawyer and didn't have to.

I have heard since that another man was out visiting and handed papers in the house where he was a guest.

The point I am trying to make is this. Maybe these things have to be done. But why at night after dark? These men are not criminals. They are on strike for a principle. Anyone who knew anything about the government report about the towboats (which all of us paid for, by the way) would understand. They were not escaping the country and would have been more easily located in the morning.

It sickens and saddens me to think that anything like this happens in Canada. We are led to believe that it might happen in Russia or Chicago, maybe. But here! No.

And I am not a person from Russia or someplace else to be prejudiced on that account. I am about as Canadian from ancestry as anyone except maybe the Indians. That is why this bothers me so. — A Mother.

Children's Hours

On a recent trip to the library I was surprised and disappointed to find that the new hours have reverted to the original ones that leave the children's department closed except from 12 to 5:30 p.m. on weekdays.

When I asked two members of the staff the reason for this regressive step I was told resignedly that they had no idea and had been given no explanation themselves.

The disadvantages of these hours have been discussed before in your newspaper. In addition to discouraging family trips to the library, the present hours are poor for most pre-schoolers who are least alert at that time.

Though we have been assured that the recent cutback in library staff will not reduce services, a comparison of those we have now and those in other cities shows that the services in the Children's Library, at any rate, were inadequate in the first place.

In Edmonton the children's libraries are an integral part of the adult ones with the same hours. Their attractive displays of animals, plants, projects and art work encourage children to use and enjoy their library.

In Victoria one has the impression that children are second class library members and are begrudged their pleasure in books.

The extension of library hours was one way of welcoming children to the library. Why were they changed again? —Patricia Carfra, 3949 Emerald.

Large, Sensitive Congregation

Pessimists reading the recent articles on our local churches might be led astray in their search for truth by the deceptive facts of statistics. Our own church has consistently set itself with courage to what may have been disconcerting to the comfortable pews, to promote the effort to live as a Christian.

Erich Fromm, in his "Art of loving" here is most helpful, in speaking of religion as experience rather than intellectual belief, one of the factors in the modern dilemna. He states "paradoxical logic leads to the conclusion that the love of God is neither the knowledge of God in thought, nor the thought of one's love of God, but the act of experiencing the oneness with God."

We still have a large as well as sensitive congregation which can accept a challenge. There must be others.—F. E. L.

Looking Back

From the Times of June 10, 1910

Berlin — By the end of June it is hoped that Germany will announce the inauguration of the first aerial passenger fleet that the world has so far known. Of course meteorological conditions will still have a good deal to do with the matter, but so far as the weather permits, the service will be as regular as can be expected. Zeppelin airships will be used for the trips.

Beginning of End or Breakthrough for Mankind?

By VICTOR COHN

If man can create a gene, he can, in theory, create life.

We now face this fact. This is the result of a piece of news last week that may rank with the splitting of the atom as a milestone in our control—or is it lack of control?—of the physical universe.

In a laboratory at 125 University Ave., Madison, Wis., a 48-year old chemist from India — Dr. Har Gobind Khorana — has made a gene. It is the first completely synthetic copy of one of the chemical molecules that directs life processes.

"It is the beginning of the end." This was the immediate reaction to this news from the science attache at one of Washington's major embassies. If you can make genes, he explained, you can eventually make new viruses for which there are no cures.

"Any little country with good biochemists could make such biological weapons. It would take only a small laboratory. If it can be done, someone will do it."

Dr. Salvador Luria, Nobel Prize-winning biologist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, commented: "The idea of creating organisms or using genetic weapons is certainly feasible, but it is almost science fiction. Unfortunately, science fiction has the bad habit of coming true."

'A new Hitler could reproduce hundreds of his own replicas'

Some day, fears Dr. George Kistiakowsky, who was science adviser to President Eisenhower, a new Hitler may be able to "reproduce hundreds of his own replicas" — new men, made to order.

Dr. Joshua Lederberg, another Nobelist, demurs. He thinks such conjecture is "based on an exaggerated mystique about the importance of the genes compared with other far more accessible influences on the development of human nature ... explicit genetic engineering in man faces enormous technological obstacles" and "promises to be an obsolete concept before it can have much practical application."

Yet Lederberg believes that strings of nucleotides — parts of genes — will indeed be built "anywhere in the next 20 years" to add to more complicated natural molecules to make "far more sophisticated vaccines" against deadly diseases.

Khorana himself points to the possibility of injecting man-made genes into future children to cure or prevent genetic diseases, like diabetes and some mental illnesses.

And "in the long distance future," believes this quiet University of Wisconsin scientist, who is suddenly famous, there might indeed be "genetic planning of individuals, tailoring people to fit patterns." This, he adds, is surely "a very, very long time off."

During budget debates a year ago in the Wisconsin State Senate — just a mile from the state university — Republican Majority Leader Ernest Keppler of Sheboygan was fuming at the high salaries paid some professors.

"How about this Har Gobind Khorana?" he said, glancing down his list. "Any of you know him?"

Khorana, who actually had earned the Nobel Prize for earlier work the year before, did not reply. This was characteristic. A man who received his first four years' schooling under a tree (there was no schoolhouse in his Indian village), a man who struggled all his early years to win education, and a man who is shy to the point of near-jitters when he must face an audience was immersed only in work. His work was the gene.

The Austrian monk, Gregor Mendel, first theorized in 1866 that there must be such a "unit of heredity." Not until the 20th century did scientists begin isolating the nuclei from certain cells and extracting complex chemicals, which they named "nucleic" acids.

'Genes may Be injected to prevent diseases'

Only in the 1940s did anyone begin to point to these acids — DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) and RNA (ribonucleic acid)— and say: "These must transfer genetic characteristics." Only in 1953 did Dr. James Watson and Sir Francis Crick, 1962 Nobelists, describe the shape of the heredity-determining molecule: a double helix.

A gene, we know now, is DNA. It is a two-stranded DNA molecule, with the strands twisted around each other like an elongated double pretzel. Each strand is made mainly of four basic chemicals — its nucleotides or bases — repeated again and again in various three-nucleotide combinations.

These combinations are the genetic code, the language by which the DNA orders the cell's other machinery to make a protein, or a man. The genetic message to do this is copied onto a matching messenger-RNA molecule — matching is the master DNA base for base — which carries it to a workbench in the cell called a ribosome. There it meets a matching transfer-RNA molecule carrying the amino acid-building blocks to make the necessary protein.

The DNA molecule that Khorana chose to manufacture is one whose job is to produce a transfer-RNA to carry the amino acid, alanine, in yeast cells. He chose it because the structure of the RNA — genetic shorthand — was known. He could thus figure backward to deduce the structure of the DNA molecule that made it.

In five years of vast human effort, working with many eager young assistants, losing sleep, undergoing great tension and many failures, exhibiting huge patience — meditating often on the shores of Madison's lovely Lake Mendota or in the Wisconsin woods — in endless chemical legerdemain inside test tubes and beakers, this dark, silent scientist:

● First joined the four DNA base chemicals (which are adenine, thymine, guanine and cytosine) into a number of short single-stranded segments with these bases in proper sequence.

● Fitted segment to segment to produce double strands as in natural DNA, but with a single piece protruding at each end: a "sticky" place (by his description) where another sticky-ended double strand could eventually take hold.

● Persuaded the ends of the fragments to join, finally, by adding a kind of repair or joining enzyme called DNA-ligase (discovered only in 1967, in five different laboratories).

Except for testing and difficulties and learning as they went along, this was all there was to it. Except it took half a decade.

It also took a strikingly international parade of youthful assistants. Khorana last week credited several of them with key roles: Cittorio Sgaramella of Italy, Hans van de Sande, Netherlands; Kjell Kleppe, Norway; Ashok Jumar and Naba Gupta, India; E. Ohtsuka, Japan; Hans Weber and Henri Buchi, Switzerland; and one American, Marvin Caruthers of Des Moines, Iowa.

"It's been so long since I've gone to a party where there were other Americans, I don't remember what it's like," Caruthers recently said with a grin.

The always cosmopolitan Wisconsin campus may soon become less so. The university's board of regents, responding to legislative anger at student turmoil, are in the process of reducing out-of-state enrolment from 26 to 15 per cent over the next three years. This was one factor in the recent disgusted resignation of President Fred Harrington. "Faculty morale is very low," says a Madison journalist.

Khorana is also leaving, with his eye firmly on the gene. He will move with his entire team to MIT in the fall, a decision he made last September. "You stay intellectually alive younger if you change your environment every so often," he explained to a friend.

The directions are clear. The new gene must be tested for biological activity. Can it really manufacture its supposed product, the yeast RNA? To do this experiment, more must be learned about nature's crucial "start" and "stop" signals to control DNA and RNA activity. This is one of the key questions in molecular biology.

Khorana also wants to learn how to make genes more simply — hopefully by just adding an enzyme called DNA polymerase to a batch of starting materials.

Ultimately he, or one of the other greats of modern biology — or some new man — may make a human gene. Compared with a human gene, the yeast DNA is simplicity, with just 77 base-pairs or rungs in the double-ladder-shaped structure that joins all the nucleotides in its two strands. A human gene may have at least six million base-pairs in its double helix.

Just the same, said the University of Wisconsin in a statement the cautious Dr. Khorana approved, "now that he has determined the rules" for chemical synthesis, "theoretically a desired gene could be made in the test tube."

What science can theoretically do, it usually does. The new biology, every biologist agrees, has already become one of the great intellectual structures of our age, to be used, like all structures, with wisdom or folly. Man's usual practice, it might be argued, is folly.

Two years ago a few senators proposed that Congress create a national citizens' commission to ponder the uses and morals of all the new and impending tools of biology: artificial genes, test-tube babies, experiments on fetuses, machines to prolong life. There were hearings. Except for a day on which Dr. Christian Barnard, then a new figure, appeared, they were intellectually stimulating but a political dud.

'Goals programmed before ethical problems solved'

"Within 25 years," Dr. Marshall Nirenberg of the National Institute of Health has now warned, "cells will be programmed with synthetic messages. Man may program his own cells long before he will be able to formulate goals and long before he can resolve the ethical and moral problems which will then be raised."

Another biologist recently guessed that this "programming" and moral crisis could start "in 10 years."

Six months ago a team of Harvard scientists isolated a particular human gene, and in merely announcing their work voiced the fact that its long-range result may be "to loose more evil than good on mankind."

Perhaps it is not too early to reconsider something like the senators' proposal. Perhaps it is time for a Commission on Life.

Chewing Up a Mountain in Name of Progress

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

HANEY — From Thornhill Mountain you look out over the shallow trough of the Lower Mainland, the North Shore mountains rising like the lip of a shattered bowl, Mount Baker to the south, and a soupy broth in the space in between.

And from this spot, no more than seven times a year, one may witness a modern miracle, the Miracle of Thornhill Mountain.

For, lo! the Carbon Monoxide Curtain doth part on these few glorious days and through the heavy folds of lungrot lying like a layer of fat over the Port of Vancouver one may perceive a vision, the outlines of the mountains on Vancouver Island.

Now in pre-industrial times this would have been no miracle at all. Quite the reverse. Had the natives looked from Thornhill Mountain and seen what I saw this week—clouds of zinc, lead, evaporated gasoline, poisons so exotic some have never been synthesized before—they would have run for cover, fearing the Great Spirit had come back as a monster engulfing the land.

But times change, the vortex of air over the city has filled up like smoke in a glass hookah, and what once was ordinary — like seeing right across to the Island — becomes so very unordinary that the right atmospheric combination occurs only about seven times a year.

For a few moments, on Thornhill Mountain, one has the feeling of being gloriously removed from it all. The plague seems miles away. Here and there are deer tracks in the earth, black bears, raccoons, bush rabbits. The filthy heavy sludge which passes in Vancouver for air barely brushes against one's feet.

Anyone wishing to enjoy this view is advised to rush. Only 49 shopping days till doom, or something in that neighborhood.

For soon Thornhill Mountain will be a molehill, slaughtered as thoroughly as cows being gutted on a killing floor. Pure terracide. It will become the biggest gravel pit in B.C.

Let me tell you why Thornhill Mountain is to be killed. The story is not so spectacular. It is, possibly, a routine story of how pieces of planet Earth are broken up and digested. In such a way will the whole thing go.

Some people are trying to stop the destruction of Thornhill, but they are confronted by money and greed, and against these they have almost no chance at all. They were people, like most of us, who did not believe that the earth was being ripped off until the ripping started taking place on their doorsteps. Too Late.

Thornhill rises only 1,100 feet, but it contains an estimated 30 million cubic yards of some of the best gravel in B.C.

A local gravel dealer, Elmer Walske, has acquired and leased 43 acres in the area to Columbia Bithulithic Ltd. Adjacent to this site is another large hunk owned by Construction Aggregates Ltd.

Construction Aggregates was acquired by Ocean Cement at the beginning of this year. Control of Ocean Cement, in turn, was acquired in March, 1968, by Associated International Cement Ltd., of London, England. Columbia Bithulithic is owned by Ashland Oil and Refining Inc., a U.S. firm. Both Ashland and Associated International are massive concerns.

Thornhill Mountain, at this point, may be likened to a fly caught in a world-wide financial web. Much of it is going to be consumed.

Of course, to the municipality, which expects to gain royalties to the tune of five cents per cubic yard from the operation, the whole thing makes perfect sense. So far as the gravel operators are concerned, resources are there to be used, the green of trees is nothing compared to the green of money.

The people living on or around Thornhill Mountain have a different feeling, but then, as everyone points out, they have a vested interest. Such selfishness. Imagine wanting to keep a forested ridge intact, when it could be converted into roads and money.

Local town people mutter that the residents up around Thornhill Mountain are being "unreasonable" and "selfish" in opposing plans to allow the area to be ripped off by big gravel firms.

Typical.

So long as we are not immediately in the line of fire, few of us care what happens to the environment.

Here, as usual, the municipality feels it should take a look at the whole picture, that the disadvantages to residents in one small area have to be measured against the advantages to the whole district. The advantages are lucre, bread, fat royalties from gravel operations at Thornhill.

Whenever a civic body decides to look at "the whole picture" in any case of resources being extracted, one may rest assured that the whole picture is mainly money.

It is almost invariably for the "good of the community at large" that one specific area — and then another, and then yet another — is broken up, disrupted, wrecked, and turned into an ecological disaster area. Spots appear, like the buboes that signal the onset of leprosy, but so long as there is money to be made, nobody worries unduly. (Except those immediately affected.) It is only when enough blotches have formed so that the whole character of an area is transformed that the cry goes out: Hey, how did this place get so ugly? How did the air get so foul?

Too late by then.

James E. Krier, acting professor of law at the University of California at Los Angeles, talking not long ago about the state of laws pertaining to the environment, said:

"The promised surge of environmental litigation calls for re-thinking much of our substantive and procedural law. Much of that law was made during the prime of the old, proprietary lawsuit, which it suited well enough; it fits poorly, however, the frame of the new lawsuit brought to protect environmental (not economic) values in the public (not private) interest. The common-law concepts of nuisance and waste, for example, are not responsive to the needs of environmental litigation. . . . They reflect a far too narrow and myopic view . . ."

Those common-law concepts, narrow and myopic, based on economic values and private interests, are precisely the ones at work around Thornhill Mountain.

They are the values which have been so deeply imbedded in our consciousness that few of us are capable of slipping out of their grip long enough to question them. Take the word "resources" for instance. When we talk about "resources," we are talking about the earth we live on, an ecological ball of wool. Snipping threads here, yanking them out there, we run the risk of unravelling the whole thing. "Resources" are, in fact, our planetary home.

Who would refer to his own home as a resource? Who would conceive of his home as a thing to be chopped up and fed into the fireplace every time the temperature dropped? Yet, in refusing to look upon the earth as anything other than a bundle of "resources," we are in reality in the position of creatures who chop up their homes to make firewood.

Thornhill Mountain contains a "resource" — gravel. Good gravel. Money is to be made from it. Cement is needed to cover up earth so that more vehicles may move faster over it. Perfectly logical.

Yet it is the logic of a parasite.

It's Just Not Our Way

By ART STOTT

The president of Nicaragua and my favorite air line, Air Canada, have done me a small favor. The president, having booked passage on a regular flight from Toronto to Miami, asked that all passengers and luggage aboard be searched. Air Canada declined.

The incident is minor, but it helps to bring into sharper focus for me a Canadian characteristic that is a source of satisfaction. We who were born and raised here, while admitting many imperfections in our system, have a fairly wholesome regard for the general way we do things — the Canadian way.

For the sake of international amity, I hope Air Canada did not tell the Nicaraguan president that his request was impertinent or intolerable. It seems to me part of the Canadian way to get along with people as a whole, to respect them as individuals, and that goes, in my book, for Nicaraguan presidents also. But had Air Canada acceded to his request and searched passengers and luggage a lot of Canadian passengers would have come to a slow boil. They'd want to know by what right any single individual tried to impose his will on the others, invade their privacy and push them around.

Of course the air line has to observe safety precautions and it is conceivable that the Nicaraguan president feared stowage of lethal weapons in luggage or in passengers' pockets that might have jeopardized his life and that of others on the aircraft.

Provided those precautions were taken, anything further would have been an imposition.

The incident is gratifying to me because periodically I ponder this business of being a Canadian, why I like being a Canadian and how Canadian culture differs from that of other countries. I'm not a flag-waving nationalist. I like to think of myself in terms of international friendliness, or recognizing people, all people, as part of the human family, basically decent once you come to understand them. There have been occasions when I've responded emotionally to specific events that have stirred my sense of being a Canadian, when something done by a Canadian has aroused my pride or when a group of my countrymen have won international praise.

Patriotism, though, has been a pretty selective, subjective element for me. For the last six decades Canada, this part of it in particular, has given me and mine a good life. That earns my respect and affection. It also imposes an obligation on me to act like a Canadian, within the scope of my own code, and to avoid doing anything that would bring odium on my country.

It also encourages me to want to see Canada remain the kind of country that, again for subjective reasons, seems to me to be a pretty good country to live in. I'll accept change, which is inevitable and frequently beneficial.

But on one particular point, I'm touchy. I resent and will oppose efforts by people who have come to this country, gained sanctuary here from lands where they found life intolerable and then set about trying to make Canada over into their concept of what it ought to be. By all means let's have the advantages of cultural enrichment which they bring with them. But when they want to alter the whole Canadian fabric, I protest.

My logic is simple. It seems to me that such people came to Canada because it appeared to them to be a country which offered them the liberties or the opportunities they believed they were denied in their native lands. When, having made the choice and come here, they start telling us that we should do this, this and this — that we don't know what it's all about and should profit from their superior knowledge and judgment, I develop a few misgivings and find questions arising in my mind. Why, I want to know, didn't they apply this superior intelligence to rectify conditions in their own lands? Is there any reason for them to assume that, having been losers before, they possess a god-given omniscience that is going to create perfection in Canada if we'll only follow their advice?

You encounter the type from both extremes, the fascists and the communists. They know the problems and have the answers — each opposite to the other.

In a general sense, it seems to me Canadians have a live-and-let-live philosophy. Within reasonable bounds, we don't clamp down on anyone who wants to speak his mind, though we don't have to agree with him. This is part of the Canadian way. But we don't take kindly to those who try to insist that we do things in the alien manner they want.

That, apparently, is what Air Canada was saying to the president of Nicaragua, as I understand it. That is what other agencies are saying to those who would impose a foreign style of life on us.

Canadians who feel as I do make no claims to perfection. We're just happy to enjoy the benefits that have come our way from living here. We're ready for improvements, or should be. But we properly decline, I think, to let every crackpot mould an entirely different type of society for us — particularly if the crackpot failed in the effort elsewhere before he sought asylum here.

Taseko Mines

Taseko Mines Ltd. reports the Japanese firm Nittetsu Mining Co. Ltd. has started an exploration program on a 152-claim porphyry copper property, located seven miles north of Taseko Lake, 100 mies west of Williams Lake.

Under agreement, Nittetsu purchased 100,000 treasury shares of Taseko Mines Ltd. at 50c per share and have an option to buy a further 70,000 shares at $1,00 per share on or before July 14, 1971.

In addition, Nittetsu is committee to spend $75,000 on exploration on the the property before July 14, 1971, and if notice is given to equip the property for production on or before January 14, 1973, a new company is to be formed of which Taseko will hold a 25% non-assessable interest.

Black Giant

Black Giant Mines Ltd. and Canex Aerial Exploration Ltd. in a joint venture, have started an exploratory program covering three groups totalling 171 claims in the Sturgeon Lake area of Northwest Ontario.

The program began May 17th, including linecutting and ground geophysical surveys designed to locate and define conductors outlined by earlier airborne geophysical work.

A drill crew was being mobilized late last month in the expectation that actual drilling would get under way early this month. Canex Aerial Exploration is directing the program.

Trizec Corp.

Trizec Corp. Ltd. of Montreal and Star Great Britain Holdings Ltd. of London have formed a new company to enable them to penetrate the United States real estate development market.

The company has been incorporated as Tristar Developments Inc., with head office in New York, said Robert Potel, chairman of Star Holdings and James A. Soden, president of Trizec.

Soden said the new company will have an initial capitalization of $10 billion and its aim will be the acquisition and development of real estate properties in the U.S.

Gulf Canada

A 193-mile refined-products pipeline will be built between Calgary and Edmonton to serve Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.'s new 80,000-barrel refinery being built in Edmonton.

Henuset Bros. Ltd., of Calgary, will construct the 10¾-inch line to provide up to 20,000 barrels a day for terminal-distribution facilities in Calgary.

Capacity could be swelled to 75,000 barrels with addition of four pumping stations, Gulf said.

Netherlands-Dalgety

Forest operations in Prince George, owned by Netherlands Overseas Mills Ltd., have been bought by the Dalgety and New Zealand Loan Co., of London.

Dalgety bought Netherlands Mills by means of financing arranged through a $1.68 million loan and a syndicate putting up Eurodollars. Participating in the latter loan are Lazard Bros. and Co. Ltd., which did the arrangements; the Bank of London and South America, Bank of Montreal, Northern Trust Co., Toronto-Dominion Bank and Western American Bank (Europe) Ltd.

Sardines Found Firm

BLACK'S HARBOUR, N.B. (CP) — The company owning the largest sardine cannery in the world also owns a dairy farm, supermarket, movie theatre, arena, fleets of boats and motor vehicles — and a dragstrip.

Everything in this southwestern New Brunswick village with a population of fewer than 2,000, about 50 miles from Saint John, revolves around Connors Bros., Ltd. The Bay of Fundy area is one of the world's greatest feeding grounds for small herring, or sardines.

The plant packs more than 2 million cases a year, valued at approximately $15 million. It can turn out more than 1 million tins of sardines daily, shipped as far away as Australia, New Zealand and Malaya. The company also markets larger herring, clam chowder, finnan haddie and fish cakes.

The late Senator Neil McLean and his brother, Dr. Allan McLean, took over the operation in 1923. The president is Senator Donald A. McLean, a fisrt cousin.

Mighty tides, crashing across Fundy twice every 24 hours, churn up marine plants and microscopic plankton on which herring feed, attracting them in countless millions. These conditions encouraged brothers Lewis and Patrick Connors to start fishing the area in 1885.

CHANGED TACTICS

First they sold their catch to canneries opening along the Maine coast. They then decided the fish could be packed fresher if canned locally. Thus the world's largest sardine cannery was started as the world's smallest.

After the McLean takeover, the 100,000-case pack of 1923 rose to 1 million by 1959. Now more than a billion sardines are processed annually. The ocean-to-can operation soon after the fish are taken from the water starts with weirs and deep-sea seiners.

The weirs, made of brush and twine, are assembled on 40-to-60-foot piling driven into the mud, built in horseshow shape over an acre or more. To protect what often is a family investment, these may not be constructed within 1,000 feet of each other.

Fish carried into the weirs by the high flood tide are surrounded with a large net. Its bottom is drawn together to form a pouch which gets smaller as the bottom is pulled together, forcing the sardines to the surface where they are pumped through a giant hose into waiting boats.

Open water seining is done in much the same way, excepting that the seiners use electronic equipment to detect fish instead of relying on weirs.

Nothing is wasted in the various processes. The scales, heads and tails are used for making essence of pearl, oil, fish-meal and protein concentrate for stock feed.

BILLING, INTEREST AT ISSUE

U.S. Credit Practices Examined

By DAVID VIENNA

WASHINGTON (WP) — A Federal Trade Commission official told a House subcommittee Tuesday that the agency's staff is preparing a report to the commissioners on the billing practices of department stores and the credit card industry.

The study could lead to new rules relating to the length of time consumers should have to pay bills without incurring interest charges and to the consumer's right to refunds in cash instead of credits on their accounts.

William D. Dison, acting chief of the FTC's division of trade regulation and rules, under questioning told a House small business subcommittee that his staff will file its report to the commission next month.

He noted that some department stores and credit card plans don't send their bills to consumers in time for payment without incurring interest charges. Moreover, he said, processing delays frequently result in interest charges even when payments are made promptly.

"We might have to define what a 30 day account means," he said. The study will include recommendations on whether interest should be charged on amounts during the time a customer disputes a charge and subsequently wins, Dixon noted.

CREDIT REPORTS

The report also may consider whether consumers have a right to examine secret credit agency reports to see if there is any personally derogatory information contained in them, Dixon said.

He suggested that a number of antitrust questions are raised by the current practices of credit card issuers.

Retailers who accept credit cards turn their charge slips over to the card issuer and in turn receive 90 per cent or more of the amount on the bill. The bank or credit card company bills the card holder for the full amount and keeps the difference.

RATES VARY

Dixon said some banks and credit card companies charge smaller retailers more than large ones. This practice is an "impediment" to the small businessman's ability to compete, Dixon said. "Such a practice could well be illegal under existing law," he added.

Some banks require merchants participating in their credit card plans to open accounts with them.

The FTC official raised another question. Since the merchant won't receive all of his money if a customer "pays" with a credit card, what's to prevent him from giving a small discount to a cash paying customer?

U.S. Car Makers Register Drop in Canadian Sales

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

North American car manufacturers, currently rushing to produce new small models, suffered a drop in Canadian sales of about 25 per cent during the first five months of this year.

Although car sales are off generally this year, almost all foreign manufacturers have increased sales in Canada and sales by Ford Motor Co. of Canada and General Motors of Canada Ltd. of cars produced overseas have held firm.

Production figures for Canadian plants, however, show an over-all increase during the January-May period. By the end of May, production was more than double sales. Labor contract negotiations are coming up this summer and while strikes might not make new cars scarce they could delay introduction by GM and Ford of new subcompacts.

Figures supplied by Ford, GM, Chrysler Canada Ltd. and American Motors Canada Ltd. showed sales for the first five months of 1970 totalled 259,872 vehicles compared with 344,379 for the same period last year, a drop of 24.5 per cent.

Sales for the January-May period of 1970 break down into 212,008 cars and 47,844 trucks while comparable figures for the previous year were 284,289 and 60,090. Car sales were down 25.4 per cent while a truck sales were off 20.4 per cent.

The latest figures available on foreign-car sales were those compiled by R. L. Polk and Co., Toronto, for the first four months of this year.

FOREIGN CAR SALES UP

Foreign-car sales were up 24.9 per cent and at that time sales of North American cars — and not including trucks — were down 19.9 per cent, showing there was a further decline during May.

By the end of April, Polk's compilation showed, foreign cars had 19.5 per cent of the Canadian market, or one sale in five.

American Motors' subcompact, the Gremlin, started coming off the assembly line in May. GM's Vega 2300 and Ford's Pinto are scheduled to appear with the 1971 models. Chrysler is not expected to introduce a subcompact this year.

American Motors' sales for the five-month period were 8,416, down 4.3 per cent from the 8,792 sold during the January-May period last year.

General Motors' sales of North American cars were 92,851, off 31.6 per cent from 135,741 sold during the same period a year ago. Sales during the period of GM's British-made cars were 4,874 this year and 5,843 last year, a drop of only about three per cent.

Ford sales of its British-built Cortina were up 31.9 per cent, with 5,725 units sold this year and 4,430 sold during the first five months of last year. Sales of North American cars during the five-month period were 57,272, down 26.5 per cent from the 77,907 sold during the same period a year ago.

Chrysler car sales for the five-month period were down 13.5 per cent, with 53,469 sold this year and 61,849 sold last year.

North Sea Oil Search Boosted

LONDON (Reuters) — The search for oil under the North Sea between Scotland and Norway has been stepped up following the American Phillips group's discovery of what is believed to be a gigantic oilfield there.

Today, the Anglo-Dutch Shell group, which shares a stake with other prospectors, said its rig Stafio now is drilling an exploration well 24 miles from the Phillips find.

Encouraging results were also announced today by Shell from a new offshore exploration in the gulf, where two other Shell wells are now producing 165,000 barrels a day.

Boeing Work Force To Be Reduced Again

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle area, already with one of the highest unemployment rates in the U.S., learned Tuesday the Boeing Co. expects to reduce its Puget Sound work force another 13,000 in the last half of the year.

Boeing's announcement said the cutbacks would drop the total payroll here to around 45,000 or slightly above — the lowest for the big aerospace firm since the summer of 1956 when it was gearing up for 707 production and the start of the jet age.

A 13,000 layoff woud bring total job cuts for the year to just under 35,000, or nearly double the 18,000 the company estimated in January would be laid off or quit.

Employment declined between Jan. 1 and June 1 from 80,400 to 58,600, or 21,800.

Boeing's payroll peaked in the area in mid-1968 at 101,500.

An immediate layoff of 1,000 employees will result from the loss of the B1 supersonic manned bomber contract, awarded Friday to North American Rockwell, said George Stoner, senior vice-president, operations.

Birthday Present Sought for B.C.

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The biggest federal centennial gift ever to B.C. may be announced next week by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The Liberal government is considering presenting at least $5 million and more likely up to $20 million next year as a project gift from Canada to British Columbians to commemorate the province's entry into Confederation July 20, 1871.

The Prime Minister will be in Vancouver Monday, June 15, to participate in the official opening ceremonies of the Roberts Bank supper port and sources here suggest he will take that opportunity to announce the gift.

A large number of suggested projects are being sifted but none has been picked yet, an informant said today.

"But it won't be some centennial fountain. The government is anxious to provide something of real usefulness to the people," he said.

Besides the project grant, the federal government will also provide a per capita sum to be spent on celebration festivities.

The 1971 grant will be larger than those provided by Ottawa in the two previous centennials celebrating creation of the crown colony of B.C. and joining of the mainland and Vancouver Island because, from the federal point of view, the Confederation entry is the most significant.

There also is a long list of possible special grants in the celebrations category.

One known to be under consideration is large federal prizes for a "dogfish derby" next summer which would have the spin-off benefit of reducing one of the sports fishermen's chief nuisances.

ART CLASSES SET TO GO IN 5 PARKS

Once again children armed with paint brushes and easels are preparing for painting in the parks classes.

The classes, open to children between the ages of 6 and 16, will be held from June 29 to Aug. 6 in Beacon Hill, Cadboro Bay, Kinsmen Gorge, Gyro and Windsor parks.

Pre-registration for the classes, which are sponsored by the Federation of Canadian Artists, must be completed by June 15. Forms are available at all schools in the area and at Painting in the Parks, 203 Beechwood.

BRIDES GET HELP TO ALTAR

KING'S LYNN, England (UPI) — Police have advised King's Lynn residents that they will provide police escorts to brides on Saturdays to make sure they get to the church on time through traffic jams.

No mention was made of bridegrooms, who apparently will have to get to church on time under their own steam.

'GESTAPO' POLICIES HIT BY ITALIAN-AMERICANS

Mafia Boss Joins Picket Line Against FBI

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge has agreed to take a first-hand look at a picket line unlike any New York has ever seen. Its target is the FBI and it has been led at times by Joseph Colombo, one of the top names on the United States justice department's list of Mafia bosses.

Meanwhile, the jurist, state Justice George Starke of the New York State Supreme Court, advised the picketing Italian-American group Monday to tone down the volume of its sound equipment, which has led to a court suit by East Side residents.

The FBI's neighbors are seeking a permanent injunction from Starke against the demonstrators, whom they describe as a nuisance. Among defendants in their suit is Colombo.

Colombo has taken to the streets with his wife, his son and hundreds of others to protest what his lawyer says is "a reign of FBI terrorism" against Italian-Americans.

"They want a congressional investigation of the FBI," said the lawyer, Barry Ivan Slotnick.

As many as 4,500 pickets have demonstrated five nights a week outside the FBI's Manhattan headquarters at Third Avenue and 69th Street, denouncing the government's chief crime-busting agency as an American "Gestapo."

The Italian-American Civil Rights League, which organized the demonstrations, said the issue goes beyond the government's drive against individuals it regards as big-time hoodlums.

Paul Arnold, public relations director of the league, said the purported harassment has extended to small shopkeepers, to housewives, to anyone with an Italian name.

"The FBI is making synonymous with the Cosa Nostra or Mafia anybody with an Italian name," he said.

BLACK SAMBO: The Cartoon Stereotype Offends

By CHESTER M. HAMPTON

WASHINGTON (WP) — Up until the late '40s, white newspapers were among the chief sustainers of derogatory racial stereotypes. The news columns seldom referred to any of the many worthwhile enterprises Negroes engaged in; the editorial columns almost never questioned the denial of basic American rights to Negroes; social columns ignored their betrothals and weddings, and, obituary pages shunned all but the butler for a prominent family or the doorman at a downtown hotel.

The sports pages, however, had to acknowledge the presence of such performers as Jesse Owens and Joe Louis.

In the mid-'30s, before Louis defeated Jim Braddock (in June, 1937) for the heavyweight boxing championship, Joe stopped in my home town, Dayton, Ohio.

On West Fifth Street, the main artery of the "colored neighborhood," he was surrounded. His complexion was tan—light tan—with a blush at the high cheekbones, the result of arduous training in the fresh air of Pompton Lakes, N.J.

A Nose, Ears, Eyes

The result was not "peaches and cream" but peaches and honey. His lips were a reddish tan well shaped. He, even as you and I, had a nose, and ears, and eyes.

Yet, when the next day's paper appeared with a sports cartoon caricature of Joe Louis, the drawing was of a featureless, coal-black face with a wide white oval designating the mouth. There was not the remotest hint of his actual features.

Instead of the brownish wavy hair that rippled from a left-side part, the cartoonist's Joe Louis had an eight-ball-smooth black head with a window-pane pattern drawn to indicate its gleam.

It was evident that the artist, told to draw a Negro boxer, had only to put boxing gloves on a Black Sambo stereotype, and sit back waiting for his laughs. The same artist who, in other work, could display sensitivity to tone and line, felt no such obligation to fidelity where Negroes were concerned.

We on Fifth Street weren't surprised. We were too sophisticated in the ways of the white press to feel more than a dull-old, tired-old realization that "they never let up."

Gone from Crowd

Some of us were even able to testify to having been among a crowd (such as a circus parade) when the news photographer took a picture and to having looked in vain for ourselves the next day when the picture of that same crowd appeared in the paper. (We didn't know anything about air-brushing, but we knew that white folks had their ways of doing things.)

So time passed. And things changed, to the extent that one of the few vestiges (outside the south) of the old insensitivity was the "Joe and Asbestos" cartoon on a New York Daily News sports page. (The cartoon survived decades of protest and was only discontinued last year when the artist became ill.)

BLACK stereotype as drawn by cartoonist Hank Ketcham was published in early editions of the Washington Post and later replaced by another cartoon.

Things changed to the extent that newspapers developed sensitivity and started trying to avoid giving offence to the black minority.

But the need for eternal vigilance is still alive.

In the "Dennis the Menace" cartoon Hank Ketcham submitted for the May 13 Washington Post, the old minstrel-mask stereotype surfaced again.

In the panel, Dennis is saying to his father: "I'm havin' some race trouble with Jackson. He runs faster than I do!"

Standing between Dennis and his father is a coal-black figure, with a broad white mouth; otherwise the face was featureless. The "He-Runs-Faster" stereotype only served to exacerbate the pictorial one.

So after 30 years of trying to forget the cruel insensitivity, suddenly I was right back in the Dayton, Ohio, of three decades ago.

Cartoon Removed

My first thought was that no newspaper should print a cartoon—that no newspaper in a town like Washington could print such a cartoon—this is without some explanation for this lapse in taste.

How many Negroes are offended is hard to say; after running in an early edition of the Post, the decision was made to substitute another cartoon.

For this, the Post received over 100 telephone calls the next day from persons who missed their daily "Dennis." But their feelings could be assuaged by his reappearance the following morning; the persons whose wounds would have been deeper would feel much more hurt than temporary inconvenience.

Several comic strips are now showing Negroes and treating them artistically just as the other characters are treated. Other cartoonists, for reasons best known to themselves, keep their cartoons lily-white—which is what Hank Ketcham might as well do until he can draw a Negro person without resorting to a racial stereotype.

Indian Battles Remembered In Nanaimo

By ELIZABETH FORBES

It's some years since I first made up my mind that one day, when I was in Nanaimo and had plenty of time, I would visit the famed bastion. Once or twice I've attempted to do so, only to find it was the wrong day or hour.

Forbes

Last week I hit it right. The door was open, and for an hour or more I was surrounded by the colorful past of a city that grew from the discovery of coal.

The bastion was built in 1853, soon after the first group of Scottish miners came into Withuysen Inlet (now Nanaimo Harbor) on orders from Governor Douglas of the Hudson's Bay Company, to open the first mine.

It's that same bastion you see today. Weather-beaten. Scarred. Minus its guns. But with its hand-hewn and squared timbers still solid and secure.

Leo Labine and Jean Batiste Fortier, expert French-Canadian axemen, did the construction work, and the fact that their handiwork survived to this day makes the feat worthy of being recorded.

At the time their axes were busy, the tiny settlement of perhaps six or seven families was surrounded by Indian bands of the S'neymoes tribe, all with villages along the inlet.

While peace was maintained so far as the whites and natives were concerned, continuing warfare between the fierece tribes of the north and the southern Indians, made it necessary to provide some sort of protection for the miners.

That's why the bastion was built and given six cannon.

And there were emergencies. On more than one occasion a runner went out from the fort to hammer on log cabin doors and shout "women and children to the bastion."

There they would be cooped up for long hours while the tribes harangued each other and either came to peaceful decisions or fought out their differences on the beaches.

In those far-away days, seagull eggs were in domestic use. The first log cabin school in the settlement doubled as post-office and as the teacher's living quarters.

Time was announced by beating a suspended cross-cut saw with a triangular piece of steel to announce noon and the supper hour.

Later it was given at regular intervals by a man beating a brass tambourine as he marched along the winding paths which have since become the city's fan-shaped streets.

Still later the Hudson's Bay Company imported a time bell from England. Settlers turned out en masse to see it installed in front of the company's store on Bastion Street.

Coal was discovered first at what is now Nanaimo and then at Wellington, a short distance away. These finds provided the main source of supply for the whole Pacific Northwest.

Miners came with their families from the British Isles, after signing contracts that included a clause providing free passage back home at the end of five years, if any of them wished.

Few availed themselves of this opportunity. Nearly all remained to help colonize that part of Vancouver Island and to become respected pioneers.

Peace between natives and coal miners was maintained, it was said, because the Indians had confidence in J. W. McKay, HBC man in charge of opening the mines. And the fact that the head chief of all the bands was a man of remarkable qualities named Wun-wun-shum.

His death is still remembered in song and legend in his own tribe and through the diaries of some of those early miners.

A fleet of 100 war canoes, manned by the Kwakiutls of the north, entered the inlet one day to demand reparation from the Wenthuysen villages for three who had been killed in an attack on one of their canoes.

Before any fighting began the invading chief made his demands. Three had died, therefore three must die in return.

Wun-wun-shum acknowledged the justice of the demand. When no one from his villages came forward to pay the debt, he offered himself in order to save his people.

"Surely I, the great Wun-wun-shum am worthy of three common men," he suggested. "If you agree, kill me, and let our people be friends."

The settlers were crowded in the bastion while this was going on. They were afraid that if a fight started the fierce northerners might also attack them and loot their cabins.

They waited, clutching their children close in their arms and praying as they stood.

After a long discussion, the Kwakiutls accepted the S'neymoes chief's offer. He stood up in his canoe, faced his enemies and was shot through the forehead.

DAY-OLD BAKERY PRODUCTS

Breadlines Stretch Food Budgets

In an attempt to stretch shrinking food budgets, the families of some locked-out and laid-off construction and mill workers are buying day-old bread at wholesale prices.

Victoria's three large wholesale bakeries routinely sell surplus products returned from retailers after a shipment of fresh baked goods is delivered.

At one Esquimalt bakery this morning 50 people waited in line for an hour to purchase bread. Most of them bought boxes of 20 loaves to keep in home freezers.

The line moved in orderly fashion. There were mostly women, but a few husbands and children stood and waited together.

Most of the families in line were bargain-hunters with freezers or large families, but some were buying bread there for the first time because they were recently out of work.

One man said he was there because he was budgeting in order to afford university tuition next fall. Another said he had been laid off from B.C. Forest Products as a result of the towboat strike.

Spokesmen at the bakeries said surplus products have been sold at discount for some time, and they denied current labor troubles had increased either surpluses or the numbers of people looking for bargains.

Retail supermarkets and groceries generally view discount sales of baked goods as competition. And bakery spokesmen explained the bulk of their trade is with retail outlets.

Surplus products "are not always available," said a spokesman for one Victoria bakery.

Civic Leaders 'Out of Touch' On St. Joseph's

By DON VIPOND

Anyone, including Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, who thinks building plans at St. Joseph's Hospital can get rolling in two weeks is out of touch.

There are too many wild and misleading statements being made on the hospital's land problems and expansion plans, the deputy chairman of the Capital regional hospital board said today.

Jim Cumming was referring to a statement from Haddock earlier this week in which the Victoria mayor is reported as saying the 150-bed extended care addition planned for St. Joseph's could go ahead in two weeks now that the city and hospital have resolved a prolonged problem over road patterns.

The fact that the hospital society and the administration of Victoria have reached an understanding which is acceptable to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark is "interesting, and certainly a step forward," said Cumming. "But it is nonsense to state the hospital could go ahead in two weeks."

It is the regional hospital district which will purchase the needed land and the Sisters of St. Ann who own the land in question.

HAVEN'T STARTED

Negotiations between these parties haven't even begun.

And even when a land deal between them is reached, the voters still have to approve by referendum spending the money, said Cumming.

"After all these things take place, then planning for the hospital can proceed . . . to state that all these things could take place in two weeks, or even in two months, is in my opinion beyond acceptance."

Cumming's statement and views expressed recently by Dr. Alex Wood, chairman of St. Joseph's Hospital board, suggest that the procedural snags blocking the hospital's expansion are a long way from resolved.

For months it has been where roads to carry expanded traffic will go in the neighborhood of the hospital. The next issue, which could prove just as thorny, is who is going to own the land needed for expansion.

$1.5 MILLION

The land in question is the St. Ann's Academy site which the Sisters have agreed to sell for $1,500,000.

The regional hospital board is on record as holding that if it raises the money for the purchase, it must hold title.

Dr. Wood has said that would produce an unsatisfactory situation, two parties splitting ownership of a hospital. It would mean the hospital society would hold title to the hospital and the regional board to part of the land.

No Safety Precautions Planned for Death Falls

No protective measures are yet planned for the Niagara Canyon area near Goldstream, where a man fell 150 feet to his death Sunday.

No one appears to know whose responsibility such protection is.

Robert Ahrens, director of the provincial parks branch, said he can't put warning signs and fences in the area because the Niagara Canyon falls is on Greater Victoria water district land, not Goldstream Park land.

LINE NOT CLEAR

Ron Upward, commissioner of the Greater Victoria Water Board, said he won't be putting signs in the area either.

"We don't even know which part of the canyon is in the water district and which is in the parks district," Upward said.

Upward said the canyon is divided between the water board and the parks but he doesn't know where the exact boundary is.

Ahrens said the parks branch is negotiating for the Niagara canyon area.

"We're trying to negotiate an exchange of land with the water district. We would get Niagara and they would get some parks land up near Sooke Lake."

Ahrens said if the canyon does become part of Goldstream Park, fencing and signs would be put up.

"The negotiations have been going on for a long time, but we aren't getting anywhere with them," Upward said.

Ahrens said even with signs it's impossible to cover all possible sources of danger.

"You can put signs in 50 dangerous areas and someone will die in the 51st," he said.

He said the responsibility rests with the individual who must know what he's doing.

TV 'Escapism'

Sociologist's Study Finds Violence Key Influence

By BOB MITCHELL

Watching television is an escape into fantasy for most children, according to a study being conducted by a University of Victoria sociologist.

More than half the youngsters who filled out questionnaires for Dr. Godwin Chu said their favorite programs were those which feature violence.

"The trend is quite clear," Chu said. "Most of them watch television to get entertainment and relaxation. The things they prefer are fantasy-type programs."

The Uvic sociologist began his study about a year ago with a $2,500 Canada Council grant, and plans to wind it up early this fall.

"Our main objective is to learn about television's role in the socialization process of a child."

In the past, Chu said, three major forces shaped a child's life: family, friends and school.

"Now we have a fourth, television."

On questionnaires, 337 Victoria youngsters in Grades 6, 8 and 9 were asked to rate those four influences according to importance in the following goals: how to get along with others; how to obtain knowledge; how to be a good citizen; and how to be happy.

They rated family, friends and school (in that order) as important factors in getting along, citizenship and knowledge.

As for happiness, television was rated higher than school, but not as high as family and friends.

Asked what they thought they get out of television, 51 per cent mentioned things like violence, relaxation, and entertainment. Chu interpreted this as meaning they "got their kicks" by watching TV.

Another 25 per cent said they didn't know what they get, and 20 per cent mentioned some kind of knowledge or lesson to be learned.

In answer to the question "What is done on TV that you would like to do?" 60 per cent of the survey sample named fantasy roles such as soldier, astronaut, actor or professional athlete.

Asked whether televison portrays life as it is, 30 per cent said it does, 30 per cent said it doesn't, and 36 per cent were not sure.

Program preferences ran as follows: crime and westerns, 50 per cent; comedies and cartoons, 24 per cent; family shows, 20 per cent; news and documentary, 5 per cent.

Viewing time averaged three hours per student daily, Monday to Thursday. One student said he put in about 25 hours in front of the set in that four-day period.

On weekends the average ranged from four to five hours daily.

Chu said he learned most children would rather play with friends than watch TV. But he also believes children who have poor relations with their parents are more likely to turn to television.

Chu, who studied in Taiwan for his BA and took his MA and PhD at Stanford, said his study is likely the first of its kind in Canada. Only a few like it have been undertaken elsewhere in the world.

The results will be published in a sociology journal, Chu said, but he didn't think anyone in television would be interested in them.

"People in the television industry don't listen to what the sociologists are saying," he said. "they listen to McLuhan."

He said if Canadians are concerned about side-effects of the large proportion of United States programming, limitations should be imposed.

"If you do not want people to learn those values, it would be advisable to put some limit on it."

According to guidelines set last month by the Canadian Radio and Television Commission, all stations will be required to carry 60 per cent Canadian content, effective Oct. 1, 1972.

Jobless Delay City Hall March

The 50-member Victoria Committee on Unemployment has decided to postpone its proposed march on city hall which was scheduled for today.

"We had a meeting last night and decided to postpone the march indefinitely. Our organization is still pretty new and some members felt that we should wait until the group has more people," spokesman Frank Cox said today.

Committee members had planned to march on city hall and apply for beggar's licences to dramatize the extent of unemployment in Victoria.

The group was formed by unemployed citizens to seek ways of finding jobs.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Could you tell me what year Oakalla Prison Farm in Burnaby was put into operation? Also, what is the acreage?—A.W.

A. It opened in 1911 and has 200 acres.

Q. I am adopted and I wish to use my own name, the one I was given at birth, not my adopted name. Is this against the law? If not, how would I go about changing it back and what would it cost?—S.L.

A. An easy answer to your question is impossible. Regulations governing changes of name for adopted persons are covered under the provincial Adoption Act and Change of Name Act. Only a lawyer can tell you what legal procedures will be necessary in your case.

Q. Could you please tell me if there is an outdoors club in Victoria, and if so, how I can join.—M.G.

A. Yes, it is called the Outdoors Club of Victoria and information on joining it can be obtained by phoning the club's chairman, Dr. John Harris, at 479-2736.

Strike Delays Pool Opening But Helps Cut Building Cost

The two-month-old construction strike will delay opening of the new Gordon Head swimming pool until next year — but also will help cut the cost of the building.

The opening will be delayed for a longer period than the strike lasts because construction schedules have been disrupted. Ald. Alan Newberry told a Saanich committee Tuesday a January or February opening now appears probable.

Cost of the pool and small meeting hall has been increased by approval of ceramic mosaic tile for the pool and environs, to replace a cement-like material originally planned. Gross cost now is pegged at $514,206.

However, the strike delay will allow the committee to invest proceeds from $400,000 in debentures issued to finance the pool. At an interest rate of 6 per cent, the committee expects to raise $8,000 in interest over a four-month period.

The total net cost — $506,206 — will be $36,000 more than the amount approved by ratepayers in a 1967 recreation referendum.

Arthur Mayse...

EARLIER THIS SPRING, the Times carried an advertisement of a most unusual sort. The party who inserted it wasn't selling anything. Instead, he offered free "a one-man re-enactment of some of the tumultuous, tragic and humorous events down through the ages" to any non-profit group that would spare him approximately 45 minutes. He supplied a telephone number, but withheld his name.

This, he explained, would be one student's way of thanking Victorians whose taxes are helping him acquire a university education.

It was an interesting ad, although one calculated to alert the skeptic. After all, life and sad experience teaches us to be wary of those who maintain that they're giving something for nothing. Anyway, just what might those humorous, tragic and tumultuous re-enactments be?

I can now report that the man behind the ad is a lean and rugged amateur actor who doubles, or more correctly triples, as a psychologist in training and the proprietor of a local business.

His name is Richard Litt, he lives at 2366 Zela Street, and he assures me that his offer can be taken at face value. His only regret is that no service club has yet seen fit to substitute his show for the standard after-lunch address.

So far, he told me, his only Victoria audience has been Canadian Council for the Blind, Victoria (White Cane Club), and that was before he ran his ad.

By this time in our conversation, I was aware that Litt is gifted with a voice of exceptional quality. But I was still in the dark about those re-enactments.

"What I've done," he explained, "is borrow certain episodes from British history. They aren't related, and I don't do them in costume."

In three-quarters of an hour, he fits himself into a considerable range of roles. He is Thomas Beckett sermonizing in Canterbury Cathedral four days before he fell victim to murder most foul.

Again, he is King James II holding forth against tobacco in terms not matched since that historic diatribe.

"As a change of pace," said Litt, who will return to Uvic for his third year next fall, "I end my show by doing Queen Victoria as a young girl the evening before her coronation.

Litt takes much of his material from plays, including those in which he has acted. He had the lead part in Victoria Theatre Guild's The Hollow Crown. Litt, then bearded, also played Beckett's chief assassin in T. S. Elliot's Murder In The Cathedral.

Married and in his forties, he is extremely earnest about the show that nobody seems to want. He's planning another series of scripts that will dramatize Canadian history, and would appreciate help from anyone with suggestions to make.

Meanwhile, he hopes that some club, society or secondary school will permit him to inject the breath of life into a few pages of the British past, as he did for White Cane Club members.

Incidentally, I'm assured by a spokesman for the group that Litt, an actor with a sense of history, really wowed 'em.

HERE'S A. NONY MOUSE, a valued if over-shy reader, with an arresting hypothesis to offer. For openers, he quotes a firm of lawn seed producers who maintain that 625 square feet of grass releases sufficient oxygen each day to meet the needs of a family of four.

Next this writer-in points out that Victoria, "because of its population density caused by apartment buildings, doesn't grow enough good grass." Hence, as he sees the matter, we're in need of a green belt to be kept so by organic fertilizers from a land-based sewage disposal plant.

"More grass-cutting would take place," he declares, "making Victorians a healthier group than less-enlightened citizens, Because this would result in perpetual photosynthesis, Victoria could really claim to be photogenic."

It's a happy scheme, except for all that grass-mowing. We're unlikely to see it emerge as a reality. But perhaps in some future of failing oxygen and close-packed population, other Victorians will!

Youthful Pro Fullback Slated to Join Royals

Victoria Royals, unbeaten in the first three matches of their first season in the Western Canada Soccer League, hope to add another English professional to their lineup before Sunday's encounter with Vancouver Cougars on the Mainland.

Dave Lawson, an 18-year-old fullback from Bedford Town of the Southern Professional League, is expected to join Royals within a week.

SHOWED PROMISE

Royals signed 16-year-old Bobby Duncan (1969 provincial soccer boy) in time for last Sunday's 4-3 victory in Seattle and the youngster showed great promise in his debut.

Although Royals tumbled Cougars 3-1 during their first meeting in Victoria on May 30, they are not counting on an easy victory this time around.

Pair of 100-Lap Races In Open Stocker Meet

Not one — but two!

Two 100-lap stock car races will be on tap at Western Speedway in a special open competition slated for June 20.

In making the announcement today, track manager Reg Midgley said that he expects approximatley 20 cars from Vancouver, "one or two" from Nanaimo and a few from the Oyster River Racing Association near Campbell River.

About 40 Victoria drivers will also be vying for starting positions in the two trophy dashes and two main events.

For the feature "A" main event, 24 cars will run with the first 12 cars reversed in starting order according to how fast they timed in. The last 12 cars will be lined up straight with the slowest car at the rear.

Thirty-three cars will run in the "B" main with the first 15 starting in reverse order.

The total purse is $1,500 with $50 bonus going to the car posting the fastest time.

Winner of the "A" main will rake in $170, while the "B" winner will collect $114.

Cars entered will range in age from 1949 to 1958 and must be powered by flathead six or eight cylinder engines. Overhead "sixes" are also allowed.

Time trials will begin at 7 p.m. with racing at 8.

Finley Making Pitch For Oakland Franchise

Bill WALKER

This was to be a pleasant relief from reality. The daily chores were to be suspended for a time. A quickie trip to The Netherlands was all that was needed as a lure. The Dutch hostesses were to be gracious and understanding. The International Olympic Committee was to pull a couple of weirdos. And a sojourn, of private nature, was to follow in Britain.

And it all happened. Yes, it did. And that's the short, short story from this corner, of the past four weeks.

But now it's back to that reality bit. So hi, there, all over again .. and here's how!

The spring junket started with an over - the - top - of-the-world flip with CP Air in a super DC-8. It took this magnificent flying machine just nine and one-half hours to make it from Vancouver to Amsterdam. And there were no stops along the route. (Which is different than it was the last time — hoo there, boy, boy, easy now — 29 long years ago.)

The North Sea arrived on schedule, six miles below, and shimmering in the early light of dawn. It did not aopear as foreboding as it once did. The pilot broke the nostalgia of what once had been an air-force career when he announced "We will be landing at Schiphol Airport in approximately one hour." We did.

Schiphol is the portal to Amsterdam, the aptly named gateway to Europe, and the sun was out for the occasion.

Great place, Amsterdam! But there will be more about that later, in the travel section, or, if more complete details are desired, a private audience may be arranged.

Because first things must, of necessity, come first. And the main item of business this day was the opening meeting of the International Olympic Committee. There was a devotion to duty, and a built-in national loyalty involved, for this was a foreign land and, after all, hadn't Vancouver-Garibaldi put in a bid for the 1976 Winter Olympics and Montreal for the summer event? Hadn't the B.C. delegates been assured of unswerving support from the International Winter Sports Federations? Wasn't a swift vote of acceptance expected for Vancouver? And weren't all the westerners just spoiling for a victory party?

Of course. But this was before Queen Juliana of the Netherlands declared the committee meetings officially open, and IOC president Avery Brundage was to breathe his usual fire and brimstone against the inroads of professionalism into his sacred domain.

There was nothing wrong with what Brundage said. He had said most of it before. And everyone got the message, but few really absorbed it.

Speaking of professionalism in Alpine skiing, his pet hate of the moment, he declared in part.

"This poison cancer must be eliminated. Alpine skiing has nothing to do with the Olympic Games."

He also spoke out against ice hockey, soccer and basketball. The committee and the assembled guests listened intently, applauded almost religiously, then later in the week looked the other way, just as they all had done for years before.

But they will study the problem, or problems, if they can localize them, which they can't. For which country can stand umblemished in the full light of a complete investigation? None is the answer. Which is what Canada said earlier about Olympic hockey, and quit international competition because of it.

Alpine skiing, is "only a mountain sport", International Ice Hockey Federation President Bunny Ahearne said here this winter. Maybe so. But in Europe, it is THE mountain sport, the glamour event of any season.

The Olympics without skiing! Perish the thought, or make it a world tourney. The same skiers will be the best ones, and will win.

But give Brundage his dues. He speaks his mind, and is either admired or detested for it.

He rules the IOC with a somewhat less than the iron hand earlier attributed to him. This was evident in light of the committee action on some of his requests. But he still has control, and is using it in the only way he knows, be threat and unuendo.

He has told the skiers to shape up or ship out. And the others like hockey players, too. But he must know the day of the golden amateur is long past. It would be ludicrous to think otherwise, after sitting in on some of the Amsterdam happenings.

Meanwhile, there was the decision of the moment. The key issue. The host cities for the 1976 Winter and Summer Games would be decided.

You all know the result. Montreal got the Summer Games. Denver the Winter Games.

Vancouver Garibaldi got nothing.

But some more thoughts on that decision tomorrow. This had been a long day.

$3.4 Million Price Tag Put on Troubled NHL Club

MONTREAL (CP)—Controversial baseball owner Charles O. Finley's bid for the troubled Oakland Seals franchise threatened to jam today's already crowded schedule at the National Hockey League annual meetings.

Finley, owner of Oakland Athletics of baseball's American League, was to make his pitch to NHL governors today to take over the Seals for an estimated $3,400,000.

Today's agenda is already crowded with the expansion draft in which two new clubs, Vancouver Canucks and Buffalo Sabres, will get 18 skaters and two goaltenders each for their $6,000,000 entry fees.

Each of the 12 existing clubs is allowed to protect two goalies and 15 other players against the intrusion by the newcomers.

Other unfinished business includes meetings between the American Hockey League, the Western Hockey League and the NHL to declare indemnification fees to be paid to the minor leagues for their displacement at Buffalo and Vancouver.

Still to be settled is the players-owner council agreement for this year. Alan Eagleson, the Toronto lawyer who is executive director of the NHL Players' Association, said Tuesday night the two sides "have reached preliminary agreement on several topics," but further discussion is necessary. He refused to elaborate.

Reds Confident of Oakland Future

Finley's unheralded appearance here was prompted by a California Superior Court decision Tuesday in which Judge Robert Schnacke ruled that the Seals return to their original ownership—a group headed by Barry van Gerbig.

Van Gerbig sought permission to regain the club from Trans-National Communications of New York in order to re-sell it to Finley.

The judge concurred, providing Finley could obtain permission to operate the franchise from the NHL governors.

Providence Reds of the AHL indicated confidence in Oakland's future when they renewed a one-year working agreement with the Seals Tuesday.

Tuesday's intra-league draft among the existing 12 clubs didn't stir much action. Fewer than 20 players were shuffled, with another four being drafted by Buffalo in the inter-league draft which followed immediately.

Stars Get Harris from Canadiens

Major move of the intra-league affair saw defenceman Ted Harris move from Montreal Canadiens to Minnesota North Stars. That indicated a further exchange was in the works between the two clubs following today's expansion work.

In addition to Harris, Montreal lost defenceman Paul Curtis to Los Angeles Kings. It brought to four the number of players the Kings have obtained in recent weeks from the Montreal organization's AHL farm club, the Voyageurs.

Other moves saw Toronto Maple Leafs draft Guy Trottier, a high-scoring centre with Buffalo Bisons, from New York Rangers. In return, the Leafs had to drop veteran right winger George Armstrong from its protected list, but there were no takers at the $30,000 draft price.

Each club could lose only one player in the intra-league draft. Goaltenders and first-year professionals were exempt.

Earlier, NHL president Clarence Campbell said the league governors had agreed to recognize the referees and linesmen's association and that the group headed by senior referee Bill Friday will be able now to bargain for officials at all levels of professional hockey.

Previous failure by the league to recognize the officials' organization led to a strike by a number of officials last fall.

One of the biggest surprises as the 12 existing National League teams prepared for the afternoon expansion draft was the dropping of centre Phil Goyette from the protected list by St. Louis Blues.

Each of the 12 clubs was allowed to protect two goaltenders and 15 forwards and defencemen against draft by Vancouver Canucks and Buffalo Sabres.

WHEEL OF FORTUNE FAVORS SABRES

Friendship Abandoned At Critical Cup Stage

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Soccer's World Cup, billed as the greatest-ever festival of professional sport and international friendship, kicks friendship out of the window today and gets down to the business of sorting the men from the boys.

This is the critical stage of the Jules Rimet Trophy preliminary group matches, the stage where the nice guys don't even come second.

Of the 16 teams that came here for the World Cup finals, 11 still are uncertain of what the future holds. Those 11 include defending champion England and, despite two wins in its first two matches, former champion Brazil.

Only two teams are definitely through to the quarter-final round of eight teams that opens Sunday, West Germany and Peru. They meet today at nearby Leon in Group IV of the preliminary contests, and the only thing at stake is top spot for their group. The top two teams from each of the four preliminary groups advance to the quarter-finals.

In the quarter-finals, the winner of Group I plays the second-place team of Group II at Mexico City; the top side from Group II takes on the second-place finisher from Group I at Toluca; the winner of Group III plays the second of Group IV at Guadalajara; and the winner of Group IV goes against the second from Group III at Leon.

In other games today, El Salvador faces the Soviet Union in Group I, Sweden goes against Uruguay in Group II, and Brazil plays Romania in Group III.

In the final games of group play Thursday, Belgium meets Mexico in Group I, Italy plays Israel in Group II, England goes against Czechoslovakia in Group III and Bulgaria is pitted against Morocco in Group IV.

CHANCE OF RAIN

The weather office in Mexico City said late Tuesday that today's soccer action would be played under cloudy skies, with a chance of rain for the El Salvador-Russia match here and the Sweden-Uruguay game at Puebla. Brazil and Romania clash at Guadalajara and West Germany and Peru at Leon.

Bulgaria and Morocco, with no chance of reaching the quarter-finals, meet Thursday for the sole purpose of salvaging a little dignity. If the Moroccans win, Bulgaria will go home from its second World Cup without a single point.

El Salvador has no chance of reaching the quarter-finals, but still can upset the applecart when it takes on the Soviet Union today.

A win for El Salvador would throw Group I open to Thursday's match between Belgium and Mexico. The more likely prospect of a mammoth win for the Soviets will pose problems of soccer politics, since it would make them probable Group I winners and entitled to play in Aztec Stadium here for the quarter-finals.

The Mexican hosts want to stay in the capital themselves instead of playing their quarter-final match in Toluca, where they would be relegated if they wound up second in Group I.

EXPECT ANYTHING

In Group II, Sweden has a chance, though a slim one, of upsetting the fortress defence of the Uruguayans. In Group III, the biggest riddle of the lot, Romania meets Brazil and anything can happen.

Brazilian camp gossip was that Coach Mario Zagalo, with four points under his belt, was tempted to put out his reserves rather than risk Pele and Tostao against the hard-tackling Romanian defence.

On the other hand, a win for Romania would mean a possibility that Brazil could be squeezed out of the quarter-final round.

This could only happen if a Romanian win were followed Thursday by a big win for England over Czechoslovakia. Such is the system that even the Czechs, still without a point from two games, could move into the quarter-finals by walloping England, provided Brazil had beaten the Romanians.

In the event of a points tie in final group standings, tournament rules would break the deadlock on the basis of which team has the greatest total after goals against are subtracted from goals scored.

Thus Czechoslovakia would have to thrash England by a wide margin, an unlikely occurrence, to reach the quarter-finals and Romania, if it got past powerful Brazil, would count on England to run up a big goals spread over the Czechs in order to sneak into the round of eight.

Most observers here pick Brazil and England to gain victories in their last group games, finish 1-2 respectively in Group III and enter the quarter-finals.

KNEE RATTLES BUT RAIMEY DECLARED FIT

TORONTO (CP) — Halfback Dave Raimey of Toronto Argonauts, cut down late last season by serious ligament damage to his left knee, has been declared fit to play again by his doctors and the Canadian Football League team's training staff, although Raimey himself is complaining of pain.

Raimey, 29, joined Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the CFL in 1965 and came to Argonauts last year in the deal that sent quarterback Wally Gabler to Winnipeg.

Raimey exhibited his old running form during a voluntary practice last week.

"Sure the knee is OK on a practice run like that," Raimey said, "but it might be a lot different with guys waiting to hammer me.

"My knee still hurts. I can do about everything I used to, but it still hurts. It even rattles."

Change in Rules Opens Door for Jump Queen

North America's top woman high jumper, Debbie Brill of Haney, will have a chance to defend her title Friday in the B.C. high school track and field provincial championships at Centennial Stadium.

Due to a change in rules this season, Miss Brill qualifies for the provincial final, but under the same circumstances last year, could not have participated.

In the past, only the top two competitors in the qualifying meet of each zone have been eligible for the finals. Debbie finished a disappointing last in the Frazer Valley zone trials last month, after previously setting the North American record of six feet, one-quarter inch in Modesto, California.

The provincial final rules have been amended this season to allow competitors who have had a bad meet in the their district final to be eligible for one of two spots in an "open" zone if they have bettered the meet standard in previous sanctioned events.

WON BY SISTER

Debbie's Fraser Valley zone difficulties were in Abbotsford last month when she surprised everyone by failing to clear the bar at five feet, one inch. The jump competition was won by her younger sister, Connie Brill, already an outstanding performer in her own right. Connie cleared the bar at five feet, two and a half inches in the Fraser Valley meet, and will also compete here on the weekend.

Also affected by the rule change is Gail Turney, the Colonist Trophy winner for the top female performance in the Island meet.

Gail is eligible to enter the 200-metre sprint despite the fact that she was disqualified in the Cowichan High meet after reaching the tape first for running out of her lane.

24 IN EACH EVENT

As a result of the change in rules, 24 athletes from throughout the province are eligible for each event — two each from the Vancouver "A", Vancouver "B", Burnaby-New Westminster, Fraser Valley, Howe Sound, Okanagan, Vancouver Island, Kootenay, North B.C. Central, North B.C. West, Parochial and Private School and "open" zones.

Provincial meet director Tillman Briggs of Victoria explains that the B.C. event will follow the same format as last weekend's Vancouver Island competition.

There will be 11 finals along with the qualifying heats on Friday, with finals in the track events to be the 100 and 400 metre runs for both boys and girls and the 1500-metre steeplechase for boys.

Field events will be the girls' high jump, discus and javelin throw, and the boys' hammer throw, triple jump and shot put.

All other events will conclude Saturday.

Friday's program starts at 5:30 p.m., and Saturday's at 12 noon. Admission for the two-day meet is $1 for adults and 50c for students with passes good for both days. There will be no advance sale of tickets.

Hilaire Elected VITRA President

Other officers elected were John Biggs (vice-president), Pat Currier (secretary), Lawrence Fox (treasurer), Denny Rand (membership) and Derek Stratford (head of technical committee).

Elected to the technical committee (a body of men which ensures that the machinery prescribed for each class of racing car at Western Speedway is adhered to) were Rand, Tom Akey, Earl Pollard and Bob Collins.

Hurlers Sparkle In Softball Duel

Bob Swanson, on the mound for Lake Cowichan, had a perfect game going until the first extra inning of the Victoria Major Men's Softball League game Tuesday at Central Park.

Then leading Bate Construction connected with their only hit of the game and went on to record a 1-0 victory over the fourth-place club.

Cowichan was also only able to collect one hit in the brilliant pitching duel between Swanson and Barry Jackson — a fifth inning single by Don O'Keefe.

Lyall Cornett stopped Swanson's streak of outs at 21 straight batters when he singled to lead off the top of the eighth inning. Cornett was then out on Tom Bourne's ground ball but Bourne advanced to second on a passed ball and scored on an outfield error.

Jackson had five strikeouts to Swanson's 11.

Bankruptcy Suit Filed by McLain

DETROIT (AP) — Admitting unsecured claims of about $400,000, suspended Detroit Tigers pitcher Denny McLain filed for bankruptcy Tuesday.

William Aikens, McLain's attorney, said the bankruptcy petition was filed in the United States bankruptcy court in Detroit after the pitcher was advised by Aikens there appeared to be no other course.

Aikens said McLain has virtually no assets and advised McLain that "bankruptcy was the only course which would enable him to straighten out his tangled finances."

McLain, who won 31 games for the Tigers in 1968, had invested in a number of businesses which Aikens said are of questionable value now.

Aikens said $275,000 of the unsecured claims against McLain are contested by the pitcher, who is scheduled to return to the Tigers on July 1 after a three-month suspension for alleged involvement in gambling.

Aikens said it appears unlikely that any of McLain's creditors will receive much.

Londoners Eye Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — A London investment company is negotiating with the Columbia Broadcasting System to purchase New York Yankees, the New York Daily News says.

The paper says Gerome D. Hoffman, president of International Investors Group Service Ltd., which sells mutual funds, confirmed the reports from his home in London.

"We are closely in touch with Michael Burke, president of the Yankees, and plan to pay top dollars for them," he was quoted as saying.

Former New York mayor Robert Wagner is the chairman of the board of the investment company and Hoffman, The Daily News reported, said Wagner would take an active part in running the baseball team if the deal is completed.

CBS purchased the Yankees in 1964 for $14,000,000 and for the last two years there have been rumors that the network would be willing to sell the American League team for the right price.

Laver Routs Tennis Rival

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Australian tennis ace Rod Laver, preparing to make his bid for a third-straight Wimbledon title, crushed India's Jaidip Mukerjea 6-4, 6-2 and Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., brushed aside Britain's Paul Huchins 6-2, 6-3 Tuesday in the Wills Open Championship.

The prestigious Wimbledon championships start June 22.

Lemon's Debut Successful; Royals Snap Losing Streak

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bob Lemon's managerial debut was a success Tuesday night as his Kansas City Royals downed Washington Senators 8-1 on a seven-hitter by Dick Drago, snapping a six-game losing streak.

Earlier in the day Lemon, the Royals' pitching coach and former star pitcher for Cleveland Indians, had been named manager. He replaced Charlie Metro after Kansas City had lost eight of nine and were tied for fifth place, 16½ games back of Minnesota Twins, West-Division leaders in the American League.

Lemon last year managed Vancouver Mounties of the Pacific Coast League.

In other games, Willie Horton hit three home runs, including a grand slam, and drove in seven runs as Detroit Tigers ripped Milwaukee Brewers 8-3, New York Yankees topped Minnesota 5-2, California Angels stopped Baltimore Orioles 7-5 in 11 innings, Chicago White Sox beat Boston Red Sox 4-2 and Oakland Athletics trimmed Cleveland 5-2.

Drago got all the support he needed from Bob Oliver, who rapped three hits, a homer, a triple and a single. A four-run first-inning was keyed by Amos Otis's two-run triple, Oliver's triple and a sacrifice fly.

Horton ripped his grand slammer in the first, wiping out a 2-0 Brewers' lead, then connected for a two-run shot in the sixth and added his 10th of the year in the eighth, a solo blast, sending Milwaukee to its 15th consecutive road loss.

Stan Bahnsen scattered four hits and Gene Michael hit a tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the sixth inning to help the Yankees edge to within 4½ games of Baltimore, leaders in the East.

Doc Edwards Again Sparks Phils

Success continued to grow from misfortune for Philadelphia Phillies as Doc Edwards, an emergency replacement catcher, produced hits for the third game in a row helping the Phillies to a 2-1 National League win over Atlanta Braves.

Deprived of regular catchers through a rash of injuries, Philadelphia manager Frank Lucchesi was forced to dip into his bullpen and activate Edwards, a 32-year-old coach.

Edwards drove across both Philadelphia runs with a single Tuesday for his fifth hit in 11 at bats since joining the active roster last Saturday.

In other National League action Tuesday, Cincinnati Reds dropped Montreal Expos 6-4, New York Mets nipped Houston Astros 2-1, St. Louis Cardinals whipped Los Angeles Dodgers 4-0, Chicago Cubs downed San Diego Padres 7-3 and Pittsburgh Pirates trimmed San Francisco Giants 5-1.

Earlier this year, Philadelphia catchers Tim McCarver and Mike Ryan both suffered broken hands in the same inning. The injury jinx hit their replacements as Mike Compton hurt his back and Del Bates his hand.

This opened the door for Edwards.

He not only singled in both runs Tuesday, but picked pinch runner Sonny Jackson off first base in the ninth inning.

The heroics have'nt turned Edwards' head. "If I was the manager," he said, "I'd put McCarver and Ryan back as soon as I could."

"I'm relaxed. When this is over, I only have to travel back to the bullpen."

Tom Seaver throttled Houston on three hits and pitched the Mets to their fifth straight victory over the Astros. Wayne Garrett homered for New York and Denis Menke connected for the Astros.

The victory was Seaver's first since May 15 and ended a four-game spin for the 1969 Cy Young Award winner.

Rocks Hope to Leave Adanacs in Basement

New Westminster Salmonbellies thumped a challenging rival at Vancouver Tuesday night to earn a higher Western Lacrosse Association spot all for themselves and Victoria Shamrocks hope to perform a similar feat tonight at Memorial Arena.

There is one slight difference.

While the Bellies stepped up into the penthouse by cracking a first place-tie with Vancouver by drubbing the Burrards 14-7, the Irish will be aiming to shatter a last-place deadlock with Coquitlam and leave the Adanacs all alone in the cellar.

Game time in Memorial Arena is 8 p.m.

STREAK EXTENDED

Salmonbellies ran a winning streak to seven games with the victory before about 1,500 fans.

Trace Wright, Paul Parnell, Larry Henry, Wayne Bellwood and Jim Giles chipped in single tallies for Salmonbellies, who jumped to 5-1 and 11-4 period leads.

Vancouver scoring was shared by Bill Rawson, Brian Ansley, Ron Flaten, Spencer Rea, Brian Bergum, Ross McDonald and Dennis Quigley.

Valiant Squares Yachting Score

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Valiant evened the score Tuesday in the preliminary trials for America's Cup yachting candidates, beating Intrepid twice on Long Island Sound.

Valiant won the first race over a 10.8-mile course by one minute, 23 seconds, and she took the second race over a 15.2-mile course by 10 seconds.

Gear failures and a few tactical errors had been costly to Valiant Monday in the first two races of the series, both of which went to Intrepid.

It was a different story Tuesday. Valiant's skipper, Bob McCullough of Riverside, Conn., sailed his boat into a commanding position on the first leg in both races and Valiant stayed out ahead both times.

The third candidate for U.S. defence of the America's Cup, Heritage, arrived in Stamford Tuesday, completing a 1400-mile trip from St. Petersburg, Fla., in 10 days. Heritage cruised under sail 95 per cent of the way up, arrived in good condition and her skipper, Charles E. Morgan, said she likely would be ready to race today.

The three candidates will finish this first series of races today.

In the other league game, Century Inn outlasted Bell's Men's Wear through nine innings to chalk up a 10-6 triumph.

Ron Griffis connected for a three-run homer in the second inning to give Colwood an early 7-0 lead.

John Paul lashed out with a two-run homer to cap the four-run ninth inning outburst that gave Century its win. His run-scoring single in the fifth inning tied the game after Bell's had rung up a 6-1 lead in the first two frames.

STRATFORD COMES UP WITH A HIT

Cries of Bravo Greet Scandal

By KORCY KOROLUK

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Scandal is pretty rough when you're on the receiving end, but it's good fun the way the Stratford Festival players present it.

Certainly, the audience thought so Tuesday night when Richard Sheridan's The School for Scandal opened on the second night of the new Stratford season. The crowd rose to its feet with cries of "bravo" when the performance ended after what seemed a very short evening.

Although the play had been on tour before its opening here, the cast seemed ill at ease, the pace lagged and at least one cue was missed in the first half hour.

But caught up in Sheridan's brilliant book, and a couple of times visibly lifted by Stanley Silverman's music, the cast pulled its production together. By the time of the famous screen scene just before the second intermission, the play was in full swing.

RECOVERS POISE

Stephen Murray, as Sir Peter Teazle, exploits the generation gap between himself and his wife, played by Helen Carey. He is hilarous as the cuckolded husband who is not cuckolded at all.

Robin Gammell started uncertainly as Joseph Surface, but gained assurance throughout, and almost stole the screen scene from Mr. Murray, Miss Carey and Barry MacGregor in the role of Charles Surface.

The Stratford company plays it to perfection—at a frantic pace, building to Mr. Gammell dancing in the agony of the oily, hypocritical opportunist finally discovered.

Lady Sneerwell was played by Pat Galloway and Mrs. Candour by Jane Casson. Miss Casson was the stronger of the two, but she had become the company's leading comedienne long before Tuesday's production.

Mr. Murray's delivery is a joy in a troupe where projection is sometimes a problem. His elocution is immaculate, and, even when speaking softly, his voice cried to every seat in the auditorium.

Miss Carey was a question mark in her minor role Monday in Merchant of Venice, but not Tuesday. She dominated the female roles.

The festival changes pace abruptly for its third opening tonight with the resentation of Hedda Gabler by Henrik Ibsen. The three plays will then play in repertory for the rest of the summer, to be joined by three more plays late in July and another early in August.

Lab Cells Save Mice From Cancer

MONTREAL (CP) — Thousands of mice are being immunized against cancer by injecting them with cells that have been grown in bottles in a Saskatoon laboratory over a period of three years, says a Saskatchewan researcher.

But Dr. J. F. Morgan, director of the Saskachewan Research Unit of the National Cancer Institute at the University of Saskatchewan, says he and his colleagues are at a loss to know why and what specific changes occur in these cells that make them lose their cancerous properties and become noncancerous. "When we find the answer to that question we'll know a great deal more about cancer," he said.

'GRADE A, FIRST CLASS AND A BOX-OFFICE SMASH'

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — With few exceptions, critics were kind Tuesday to the Stratford Festival opening performance of The School for Scandal by 18th-century English playwright Richard Sheridan.

Several pronounced it the hit of the season, and the season is just two days old.

What they said:

Stewart Brown, Hamilton Spectator: The School for Scandal stood revealed as a savory morsel, a grade-A, first-class-honors comedy hit that should be a box-office smash for the confirmed and unconfirmed theatre-goer.

Peter Bellamy, Cleveland Plain Dealer: It would entice a graven image to prolonged laughter. The screen scene . . . is a comedy triumph.

Jacob Siskind, Montreal Gazette: However you may disagree with Michael Langham's conception of School for Scandal, you cannot but be captivated . . . This is not a show that will please everyone, though it will certainly entertain most.

Herbert Whittaker, Toronto Globe and Mail: . . . A meticulous, impeccable and entirely delicious production . . . It holds us rapt, wins our laughter and makes its point with the same kind of impact that it must have had originally at Drury Lane.

William Glover, The Associated Press: . . . The School for Scandal, is polished up with boldly fresh cleverness . . . Much of the concept's effectiveness results because innovation sneaks subtly into the performance.

Booze Bill Read

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba legislature Tuesday gave second reading and approval in principle to a bill which would bring broad changes to the province's liquor laws. Hours and locations for sale of liquor would be extended, beer allowed at sports events and longer hours for broadcasting of liquor proposed.

Objectives Backed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ron Basford, federal consumer and corporate affairs minister, said Tuesday most organizations generally support his department's objectives of protecting consumers.

Basford told a news conference current efforts are intended to eliminate "unethical outfits."

He said consumer complaints — which doubled in number last year and likely will double again this year — are topped by objections to prices, and serving difficulties, while unfair labelling is high on the list.

Surplus Cited

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prof. Millar MacClure of the University of Toronto said Tuesday there is a surplus of PhD graduates in English for the available teaching positions.

In his department in Toronto, Prof. MacClure told the Canadian Association of University Teachers of English, meeting during the month-long Learned Societies of Canada meetings here, only half those qualified for positions at the university will receive them next year.

Poet's Dilemma

WINNIPEG (CP) — Simon Fraser University poet Stanley Cooperman told the Canadian Association of University Teachers of English that he felt excommunicated from the current literary scene because even if he agreed with a poem's political content he could judge it a bad poem if it had no esthetic value. "No matter if the end of the world is being predicted, we can't stop esthetic writing," he said.

Fight Goes On

More rain and cool weather were forecast today across fire-scarred timberland in northern Saskatchewan and Alberta, but precipitation was expected to be light and accompanied by lightning in some cases.

More than 2,000 men continued battling 69 fires in Alberta and in Saskatchewan, while Alberta forestry officials faced the threat of new fires in the tinder-dry Rocky Mountain foothills.

Driving at 98

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (Reuters) — Auckland's oldest driver, 98-year-old Wesley Firth, passed his annual driving test with flying colors. He has been driving since 1913.

Emergency Session Threatened

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher, angered at strikes that have tied up construction work in Saskatchewan for two months, has threatened to call the legislature into emergency session.

He said the proposed special session could be asked to pass law "more stringent" than the Essential Services Emergency Act, a controversial labor law passed four years ago.

The premier held an hour-long meeting Tuesday afternoon with representatives of the striking plumbers and pipefitters union and the building contractors and said the situation is serious.

Because of the province's economic position, with a shortage of cash among farmers and sagging international prices for wheat, he said, "we can't let this strike go on much longer."

Plumbers and pipefitters began a strike two months ago across the province after negotiations broke down on a new contract with the Saskatchewan branch, Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors Association.

B.C. ROUNDUP

Marshmallows Fly At City Council

VANCOUVER (CP) — Marshmallows and slogans rained down on city council Tuesday as The Action Committee for Unemployed Youth and supporters protested a decision to supply police with 150 extra riot sticks.

They said the marshmallows represented stones. Mayor Tom Campbell had ordered the $850 purchase of three-foot riot-sticks as head of the police commission, overriding a council vote to defer the purchase.

"Democracy, Not Tom's Clubs" and "Impeach Tom The Tyrant," read some of the protestors' placards. On the steps of city hall one youth in a helmet with a face shield, supposedly a police officer, repeatedly hit another youth on the head with a long, red balloon.

Mayor Campbell was forced to recess the council meeting for an hour while the demonstration broke up.

"I think this protest was an exception but it's certainly not the sort of behavior I'm prepared to tolerate in the future," said the mayor.

"I can assure everybody if you're not in a riot and you don't attack a policeman, you'll never get hit by a nightstick."

Hostel Blocked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Heavy opposition from local residents forced city council to cancel YMCA plans to use its East End building as a youth hostel for travelling youths this summer. A petition with 50 names said the hostel would be used mainly by hippies and "we abhor the thought of having our youngsters and students in close proximity to any hippie element."

'War Could Come'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Maurice R. Harries, new director of the western regional Emergency Measures Organization, said Tuesday his biggest problem is keeping the province in a state of "general preparedness." War could come at any time he said. "The situation could change overnight. The decision might be made in Moscow or Washington."

OAP Rise Wanted

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Old-age pensions should be raised to $150 a month with further increases linked to the cost of living, the British Columbia Senior Citizens Association decided at its annual convention here. Income tax exemptions should also be doubled for over-65s, the association said.

Picketer Effective

KELOWNA (CP) — A one-man picket line has kept eight workers off an $85,000 renovation job at the Willow Inn Hotel here. The man began picketing Tuesday with a placard reading "non-union scabs." The hotel said it would seek a court injunction against the unidentified picket.

Service Suggested

VANCOUVER (CP) — Agnes Kripps, Vancouver South Social Credit MLA, told a group of elementary school students Tuesday she wants a mobile counselling service for young people throughout B.C. Mrs. Kripps said the "opportunity caravan" could provide information in such areas as education, jobs and drugs.

N. QUADRA HYDRO PLANS STIR PROTEST

The North Quadra Land Use Protection Association will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Lake Hill School auditorium to consider B.C. Hydro's plans to construct a service centre in the Quadra-Beckwith vicinity.

"It is a fact that B.C. Hydro's intentions will seriously violate the established zoning areas set out by Saanich," G. A. Reimer, chairman of the association, said in a press release.

"It is imperative there be a large representation at this meeting to show the residents support the association's beliefs."

Chamber Asks Tax Incentives

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's tax system should give more incentives to business to develop Canada's potential fully and not concern itself unduly with redistribution of wealth, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce told a Commons committee Tuesday.

Frank S. Capon, chairman of the chamber's tax reform committee, said that if business is given a free hand, it will develop the real wealth of the country and natural forces in the economy will see that incomes are properly distributed.

The chamber's brief to the Commons finance committee, studying the government's white paper proposals for Income Tax Act revision, said maximum tax rates of 50 per cent should be a cornerstone of tax law.

It also said that only short-term capital gains should be treated as normal income for tax purposes, and any profits earned on investments held for more than three years should be taxed at lower rates.

SHOULD BE PASSED ON

The brief said credit for all corporation taxes should be passed on to corporation shareholders as an offset against their personal income taxes. The chamber would abolish the white paper's distinction between closely-held and widely-owned corporations.

The government proposes to allow shareholders in widely-held companies credit for only half the corporation taxes paid.

Mr. Capon defended the full credit to shareholders for taxes paid by their corporations as a means of eliminating double taxation—taxes on both the profits earned by the company and the dividends paid to shareholders out of after-tax profits.

He said ultimately he hopes that corporations would pay no taxes, but admitted such a possibility is "a long way down the road."

He also said the tax system is not the best way to redistribute incomes, by taxing the rich and giving to the poor. The more then country relied on the tax system to do so, the deeper it would get into trouble.

In his view, Canada already had achieved a fair distribution of incomes. He suggested the poverty group in Canada is about one per cent of the total population.

FIGURE DISPUTED

John Burton (NDP—Regina East) and John Roberts (L—Simcoe) recalled the Economic Council of Canada estimates that 25 per cent of the whole population, 20 per cent of urban families and 40 per cent of rural families are at or below the poverty line.

"This so-called poverty problem has developed because we have not allowed the system to generate the maximum amount of wealth," Mr. Capon said. If business was given a free hand, it would develop all the wealth needed.

But to have the tax system take some of that wealth and hand it "to these people" destroys incentives, Mr. Capon added. Business could supply employment to most people, and it was a responsibility of government to provide for their leisure time and a better life.

Librarian's Experience Shows Child's Book Hard to Define

By JUDI FREEMAN

If you have to choose a book for your child to read, then pick one you would read yourself.

Better still, read it first before you pass it on to younger minds. You never know how much you'll enjoy dipping into the world of "children's literature."

"A children's book is hard to define." says Ann O'Brien, newly-appointed children's librarian for the Greater Victoria Public Library.

"If it is a good book, it appeals to all ages, including adults. If it's not good, it will sit on the shelves."

There is a corollary to this. A so-called adult book will draw readers from the junior secondary school level.

For this reason, books such as Werner Richter's Bismark, C. S. Lewis' science fiction, and Mirvish's The last Capitalist can be found on the senior shelves of the library's Youth Department.

TEEN ROMANCES

There are also the predictable boy's adventure and the girl's romance novels found in the teen section, along with Bronte books.

"In book selection, we try to reflect youth's wide interests," says Mrs. O'Brien.

However, Mrs. O'Brien says, the public library is not trying to compete with or replace the school library.

"We're supplementing the students' reading. The school library reflects the curriculum. We try to reflect the curriculum and the students' outside interests."

Choosing books for preschool and elementary children is as difficult as choosing for older readers, Mrs. O'Brien said.

A ten-year old's request for a book on bees may take her to the pre-teen fiction shelves for a look at fairy tales, or it may send her wandering into the senior non-fiction area for a browse through a science book.

This example emphasizes the futility of trying to label books as being "for children," or even "for ages 10 to 12."

When Mrs. O'Brien choses a fiction for a library, she asks three basic questions: Is it lively? Is it interesting? Is it true?

In order to find out if the book meets her requirements, she prefers to read it herself and make a personal evaluation.

ANN O'BRIEN
. . . a good book suits all ages.

"Unfortunately, we can't always do this here in Victoria. We rely a good deal on library review magazines and other review media."

Several times a year the librarians go to Seattle to a book selection meeting. There, they read as many as they can.

Again, unfortunately, the bulk of available book material comes from south of the border, says Mrs. O'Brien, and careful selection must be used.

Right now, the main theme in American books for children is life in urban society. A recurring plot is how the ghetto child comes to accept the life around him.

REFLECTS PERIOD

"Literature, whether it is for adults or for children, reflects the time in which it is written. Dickens wrote for his period; our authors write for this time."

That still leaves the matter of choosing books which are relevant to a Victoria readership.

A good children's book will "ring true" and the setting in New York or Vancouver will make little difference. Charles Dicken's English classics have as much appeal as Lyn Cook's modern Canadian works.

"Children are not prejudiced. If it is appealing, they will read it."

Mrs. O'Brien has had more than 20 years experience in public and school libraries. She holds degrees in hostory and library science, and speaks several languages.

Her work has included librarianships at the University of Conneticut pilot high school and in a neuro-psychiatric library.

Currently a resident of Mill Bay, Cobble Hill, Mrs. O'Brien has a son, 15, and a daughter, eight months.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Church warden John Daniel got quite a shock when he met the dean's secretary, Nora Hughes (right) and her twin sister Gwen, modelling the long and short of fashion today on the steps of Christ Church Cathedral. Their outfits are among the many gathered by the Women's Parish Guild for the boutique stall of their Fun Fair. The fair, which is replacing the garden party held in other years, will take place Saturday, beginning at 2 p.m. in the parish hall. As well as the boutique stall, which will feature hats as well as good used clothing, there will be stalls of gifts, an attic of treasures and a home baking table featuring chicken pies. The tea will be included in the price of admission. (Robin Clarke Photo.)

String Saver's Space Dilemma Grows With Each Spring Cleaning

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — My mother used to say, "I never threw anything away in my life but that I needed it the next time I turned around."

The message got through so well that she was one of the most efficient string savers I have ever known. My husband now assures me she passed on the habit — but well.

I just cannot bear to throw anything away. Period. But it's creating space problems as the apartment we've been giving a spring refurbishing gets smaller rather than larger as I try to clear out unnecessaries. Honestly, I try.

They tell me there are millions of others like me and certainly the psychologists and psychiatrists would have a loverly time examining our psyches and explaining why this clinging phobia. Hangover from a depression childhood when saving meant having or eating? Insecurity? Something to hang onto like Linus' blanket?

Whatever, all of us have some hangups.

One of mine is packing cartons. I cannot resist them. So at the moment, I'm hanging on to a couple of brown cartons about the size of small refrigerators. New lamps came in them. No telling what will go in, now that the lamps are out. But those boxes are going to be handy . . . maybe five years from now.

I have a thing about remnants, too. Something just rebels when I try to discard leftovers from slipcovers or drapes, and the excuse my spouse hears is that "I'm going to make them into a patchwork cover for some cushions". Patchwork is very fashionable now, you see.

He knows of course we'll never see the patchwork cushions. He cannot figure out why I'm hanging onto some scraps from cutting a rug to a smaller size.

"Someone may drop a cigarette and burn a hole . . . then I'll need to repair," I explain. He is the only smoker in our house and in the more than a decade of our marriage, he's not dropped a lighted cigarette yet. But I want to be prepared.

In clearing out, we found fabric samples from the previous decoration five years ago and hubby said, "For heaven's sake, can't we throw those away now?" He thinks I did. Actually, I just packaged them in a protective plastic bag and hid them.

Our house is filled with paper and shopping bags, plastic bags that new shirts come in, wire coat hangers from the cleaners, leftover tiles from redoing the kitchen floor (never know when one of them will buckle and need replacing), half-used candles from the last electrical blackout (we could have another), umbrellas that no longer open, beat-up airirline bags, and empty glass jars which once held pickles and the like.

The last are excellent for holding leftover paint. Never mind that we have no paint leftover after having the job done professionally.

Some people I know won't discard clothes, although they're long since out of style, worn out or won't fit. Clothes are not one of the hangups, however. Whatever charity can use, charity gets.

The around-the-house shorts and housecoats, worn out, become dust cloths. What else?

I consider it lucky that we live across the hall from a neighbor who seems to have absolutely no inhibitions on discarding.

So, I sort of keep an eye peeled for what might show in the back hall for garbage collection. Guess what I found the other day. A perfectly respectable spice rack.

It was exactly like one I'd always planned to buy . . . and I know exactly the place it will hang . . . when I get around to that.

NOT FEMINISTS

Duplication Prompts ACW Integration

The current integration program of the Anglican Church Women of Canada which will eventually bring them into the main body of the church is not an evidence of militant feminism, their national president said recently.

"It is rather an attempt to avoid duplication of time, energy and money as we support the work of the church," Mrs. H. G. Waugh of Toronto told the group's annual meeting.

"We must make it clear to critics of our integration goal that we are not militant feminists, that we oppose the selection of a woman for a position merely because she is a woman. Our concern is that the person most able to do a job be chosen regardless of sex, and that if a woman is chosen she be willing to serve with the full support of other women."

The policy which is being gradually implemented shows that church women are aware of their changing contribution to today's world in which rigid male-female roles appear to be breaking down, Mrs. Waugh said.

"We think that we can bring into the decision-making bodies of the chruch a spirit of dedication, a willingness to experiment and a great deal of courage and energy."

International Fete Planned

St. Matthias Church International Garden Fete will be held Saturday from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the church hall. The international theme, commemorating the 25th anniversary of the United Nations, will be carried out in several displays.

Members of the Women's Guild will serve strawberry shortcake with tea, and there will be stalls of home baking, toys, books, treasures, novelties and plants. A puppet show is planned for the children.

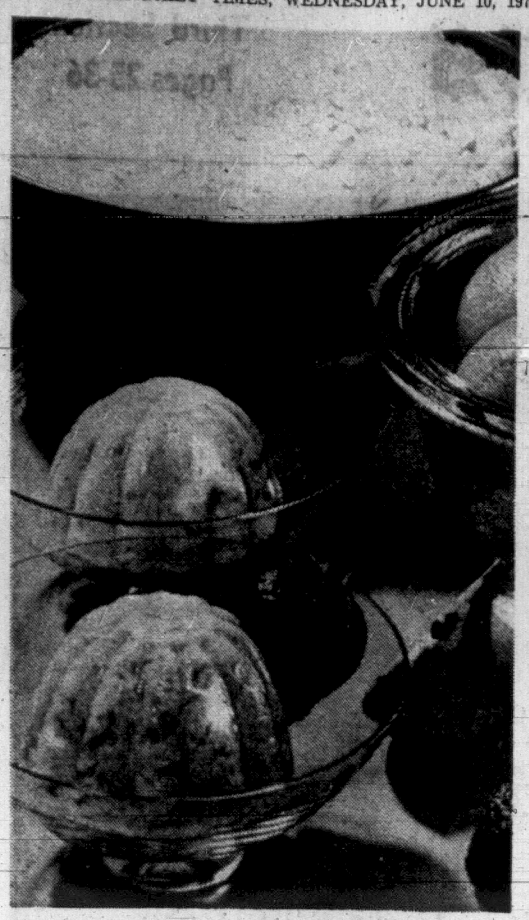
For Dessert—Say Cheese



Cottage Cheese With Fruit

Two of our earliest go-togethers could have been cheese and fruit. Brillat-Savarin, a French food connoisseur, once said "a dessert without cheese is like a beautiful woman with only one eye."

Most cheeses go with most fruits. The choice and manner of serving are endless. The home economists of the Canada Department of Agriculture offer ways of combining two soft white cheeses, cottage and cream, with fruit as a dessert.

Cottage cheese, heaped on lettuce leaves and decorated with well-drained canned or fresh fruit, is appealing in its simplicity. It does, however, lend itself well to a jellied dessert such as the Cheese Lime Molds containing crushed pineapple. This dessert may be served on lettuce and garnished with fresh strawberries or other fruit.

Cream cheese is used in the two molded desserts, Minted Pear Salad and Apple Cheese Cups. The former recipe uses the cheese to fill canned pear halves before they are covered with a clear jelly mixture. In the "Apple Cheese Cups" recipe, softened cream cheese is dissolved in a jelly before diced apples, celery and shredded carrots are added. Either of these two cheese-fruit desserts may be served in individual molds as part of a fruit salad plate.

CHEESE LIME MOLDS

1 3-ounce package lime jelly powder
1 cup boiling water
½ cup pineapple juice
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 cup cottage cheese
½ cup drained crushed pineapple
½ cup finely diced celery

Dissolve jelly powder in boiling water. Add pineapple juice and lemon juice. Chill until beginning to set. Mash cheese and fold into jelly mixture. Fold in pineapple and celery. Pour into individual molds and chill until firm. Makes six individual molds.

MINTED PEAR SALAD

1 19-ounce can pears
2 3-ounce packages lime jelly powder
2 cups boiling water
1 1-3 cups syrup from pears
2 tbsp lemon juice
¼ tsp. peppermint extract
¼-ounce package cream cheese
½ tsp. grated lemon rind
3 tbsp. finely chopped walnuts

Drain pears, saving syrup. Dissolve jelly powders in boiling water. Add syrup from pears, lemon juice and peppermint extract. Chill until slightly thickened.

Combine cream cheese and grated lemon rind. Fill cavities in pears with part of the mixture. Form remaining cheese into small balls, roll in chopped nuts and reserve for garnish. Pour a thin layer of jelly into mold or 8-inch square cake pan. Chill until almost set. Arrange pears cut side down in mold. Pour remaining jelly over pears and chill until firm. Makes six servings.

APPLE CHEESE CUPS

1 3-ounce package apple jelly powder
1 cup boiling water
2 tbsp. sugar
¼ tsp. salt
1 8-ounce package cream cheese
½ cup apple juice
2 tbsp. lemon juice
1 cup diced unpeeled apples
½ cup diced celery
½ cup shredded carrots

Dissolve jelly powder in boiling water. Add sugar and salt. Cut cheese in pieces, add to jelly and beat until smooth. Add apple juice and lemon juice. Chill until beginning to set. Fold in remaining ingredients. Pour into individual molds and chill until firm. Makes eight small molds.

Czech Designers Ignored by Factories

By MARGARET NESS

PRAGUE (CP) — Miniskirts aren't plentiful in the streets of this lovely Czechoslovakia capital, and the older women don't seem to be fashion-conscious at all—whether for political reasons or otherwise.

Livia Roubickova, a designer with the state-owned Institute of Interior and Fashion Design, says that women over 40 in the Communist world just aren't interested enough in themselves, not even to the extent of using makeup.

Certainly this lack of fashion interest among the older women isn't the fault of the institute, which North American fashion writers would consider as avant garde as any in the world. Its designers are allowed to go to Paris and London to study the latest trends, even though the Communist higher-ups don't encourage their citizens to travel abroad.

RAPPORT LACKING

The trouble seems to be a lack of rapport between the designers and the foundry type of dress production at the manufacturing level. The institute has a team of six designers—one is a man—who create the Prague collections but then must submit them to the state-owned manufacturing industry for production.

But the catch is that the manufacturers can alter the designs to more-conservative styling, which the designers find frustrating.

The largest manufacturer is Great National Enterprises in northern Moravia, producing women's coats, dresses and costumes. There's another factory for women's clothes, and for children's, in Prague itself. The other seven factories are scattered in Moravia and Slovakia.

The institute designers are already working on spring, 1971, in order to give the manufacturers plenty of time for production. Asked about midis, Mrs. Roubickova said they had a few in this spring's collection and will have more for fall, but less than 20 per cent. Colors for spring, 1971, will include the usual classic marine blue and white, as well as pale lilac, caramel, pastel turquoise and coral. This fall they like aubergine, olive and black.

Only domestic fabrics are used in the collections since this will be the fabric most used by the manufacturers. But imported fabrics can be bought in the stores by the yard, in the larger cities.

STRONG ON COCKTAILS

The 1970 spring-summer collection includes a smart pants - and - mid-thigh-jacket with a quilted border. An amusing linen beach dress has a kangaroo pocket under an apron effect. Oddly, the collection was strong on cocktail and late-day dresses, since the demand for these would be fairly limited, except in Prague itself.

One short ruby red velvet was trimmed with matching ostrich feathers, a popular spring touch in New York. Many of the gowns were heavily beaded and ornamented since this is a specialty of Czechoslovakia, and much of the beading can be bought by the yard—a good buy for tourists.

One floor-length gown had four rows at the hemline in beading and copper drop leaves. A sleeveless short dress had a beaded neckband and a double row of bugle beads and pearls around a front apron effect.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Truth Is Best

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this not for myself, but for a friend. "Miss X" is a beautiful, intelligent 22-year-old girl who had an unfortaunate romance when she was 15. This resulted in a hurry up marriage and a baby. She was divorced at 17.

She met and fell in love with David, a fine young man who knows about her past, but loves her and her child and wants to marry her. David was raised a Catholic, but he isn't devout. (However, his parents, for whom he has much love and respect, are strict Catholics.)

David is taking Miss X to meet his parents (they live out of town) before they announce their engagement. Naturally Miss X wants David's parents to like her, and I'm sure they will, after they get to know her because she is such a terrific girl, but don't you think since they're so Catholic, if they are told right off the bat that she's a divorcee with a 6-year-old child, they might be prejudiced against her?

Wouldn't it be better if David's parents met her and had a chance to know her and like her, and then they were told about her child and divorce? — Miss X's Best Friend.

DEAR FRIEND: It strikes me as rather strange that a young man who "loves and respects" his parents would suddenly appear with a fiancee on his arm without having mentioned to them that he had marriage in mind, plus a few vital facts about the girl. But since that's the case, I think Miss X and David should tell them right off the bat that she's a divorcee with a child. To deliberately withhold these facts until after they get to "know her better" would be dishonest, and would surely cause resentment when finally disclosed.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a brother-in-law, age 67, who makes improper advances to my 88-year-old mother. This started a few years ago. He is so sly, he makes sure he isn't seen by his wife (my sister), but I have caught him at it and so has the housekeeper. He obviously needs help? But how? And who? I can't visualize this man going to a psychiatrist. Why he doesn't even go to church! Do you think I should speak to him? He isn't really what anyone can call "mentally unbalanced" — except in this one area of behavior. When he is around Mama we have to watch him every moment. Thank you for any help you can offer—Concerned.

DEAR CONCERNED: Yes, speak to him about it. (He is probably becoming senile, so talk to him as if you were speaking to a "naughty boy.") And for goodness sakes, don't ever leave your poor mother home alone with him. (P.S. It wouldn't hurt to ask your family doctor for his opinion.)

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to Mother, who was worried about her son seeming to want punishment.

I am only 15, but I have heard many friends say they thought their parents didn't really love them or care about them because they were rarely punished.

I believe that most kids need to be punished when they do wrong. It may be hard for parents to understand, especially when the child puts up a fight, but after the tears are gone and all is forgiven, the kids will have a much more secure feeling because they know their parents care enough about them to keep them on the right path. — Punishment Necessary.

DEAR PUNISHMENT: You may be "only 15" — but you are very wise.

NEW LOOK FOR NURSES

A Rose by Any Other Name Could Very Well Be a Hobby

By FRANK L. SPENCER

CHICAGO (UPI) — Many a man probably would enjoy such activities as dog breeding, cooking, woodworking and finger painting—if only he could be assured that somebody would not accuse him of having a hobby.

There is nothing wrong with having a hobby. Doctors and wives say every man should have one. But surely there must be something better to call it.

A man who spends his days running a bank or factory or a gravel truck may want to spend his evenings weaving baskets, making quilts or arranging flowers.

But do we absolutely have to call whatever he does his (ugh!) hobby?

The word seems to allude to the verb hobble, which refers to being restricted. Then somebody invented a hobby-horse for children and the work, never much to begin with, suffered damage beyond repair.

Having a pastime isn't any improvement. An avocation might be better. The language seems totally unprepared, though, to carry the burden hard-working men demand of it.

There is one slim ray or hope. It is possible for a man to do his own "thing". He could collect stamps, rare books or butterflies and could make model planes, bird houses or explosives.

HIS OWN THING

Right now, however, it is almost impossible for a man to do his own thing unless he also has shoulder-length hair.

Now is the time for men to find a new word. If we are to survive in this new leisure era we must get a substitute for "hobby."

If we don't, there is a good chance millions of Americans will be sitting around with nothing to do, but refusing to do anything if what they undertake will be called a hobby.

There is a man in the Chicago area who spends much of his spare time building shelves.

These are quite ordinary shelves. Most of them are totally unnecessary, but this man gets pleasure in constructing them. He has done this for years and his house is full of shelves.

If his wife ever told anybody that shelf building is her husband's hobby though, he would cease immediately.

STATUS OF WOMEN

Iron Curtain Trends Show Jobs Alone Don't Liberate

By SUSAN BECKER
(First of Two Articles)

OTTAWA (CP) — Sylvia Gelber, director of the women's bureau for the federal labor department, is all for seeing that men and women share equal opportunity in the work world.

As Canadian representative on the United Nations commission on the status of women, she's seeing the trends in other countries — some she finds surprising.

She was "flabbergasted" recently by a stand taken by Communist countries at a meeting in Geneva of the 32-member commission.

"The U.S.S.R. boasts that about 80 per cent of its doctors are women and about 50 per cent of its engineers are women and frankly, in my naivete, I assumed that the status of women in Russia is relatively satisfactory," she said.

But one member of the Communist bloc had proposed a resolutionas king for special privileges in labor legislation for women and criticizing the International Labor Organization for failing to provide such standards.

She asked if this meant labor regulations for working women should be raised to the level of those for men.

Communist delegates replied that women should have privileges beyond those of men — such as better retirement benefits.

DIDN'T GET ANSWER

"In trying to understand this, I said: 'Look, if you want equality, what is the basis for asking more for women than for men?'

"I never got a specific answer but I started asking a lot of questions behind the scenes.

"My impression is that while in Russia women have been encouraged to get an education and to enter professional activities equal to or exceeding those of men, that in the homes the women in Iron Curtain countries are still in the 9th century.

"So the Russian working woman has twice the load of the working woman in our society.

"A lot of our people who think that revolution brings social emancipation should not be misled by the large numbers of women in some professions in some countries.

"They've also got to look at prevailing attitudes before they can judge the status of women in them."

Miss Gelber says she is not criticizing Russia because Canadians aren't in a position to criticize others.

CHARTER FOR MOTHERS

During its meeting the UN commission came up with two main resolutions which must be referred for approval to the United Nations Economic and Social Council for approval.

Although she is not anxious to talk about them in detail until they are accepted for fear some changes may be made, Miss Gelber said one deals with a long-term program for women's advancement.

The other is what she calls the "charter of the unmarried mother." It was introduced by Norway and seconded by Canada.

"It recommends that an unmarried mother have the same legal rights with respect to her child as a married mother," Miss Gelber said.

"Unmarried mothers with children in some countries are often subject to legal and social discrimination although they assume a heavy responsibility."

Seated in her 12th-floor Ottawa office — bright with paintings and sprinkled with books on human rights, Miss Gelber turned to the working woman in Canada.

"Quite obviously we're far beyond the stage where it should be discussed whether it is right or wrong for a woman to work outside the home," she said.

NOW IT'S FACT

"This now is a fact. But society has yet to work out proper provision for the care of pre-school children and working mothers."

The bureau has recently completed but not released a study on working mothers and child care in Canada, based on figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in connection with a labor-force survey in April, 1967.

It shows that at that time in Canada there were more than 1,000,000 children under 14 whose mothers worked. Of these, 35 per cent were under 6.

Miss Gelber says that since then the figure has increased because of the trend in the last few years for more and more married women to enter the labor force.

She also says she would like to "gear a lot of data to the young girls before they're brainwashed."

KIDS ARE SCARED

"Parents and vocational counsellors aren't helping them. Vocational counsellors are telling them not to go ahead because they won't get jobs. Parents are afraid they won't get married and the kids are scared.

"Margaret Mead, a noted that women today are afraid U.S. anthropologist, has said to succeed lest they be thought less feminine. Men today are afraid to fail lest they be considered less masculine.

"I think both are true. We've got to change this and I think advertisers bear a terrific responsibility for these perverted attitudes.

"If an anthropologist in the next century opened some of today's fashion magazines, he would say that in 1970 a woman over 30 didn't exist. Or one with grey hair. Women's activities would consist of going to the hairdresser or looking beautiful at the races . . ."

EATON ABOARD THE SHAY ENGINE 'HILLCREST 1'

Store Magnate Is Steam Buff

DUNCAN — As the Hope Diamond is to a gem fancier, so a Shay steam logging engine is to a locomotive nut.

So Timothy Eaton journeyed from his home in Toronto to examine one of the last steam-powered logging engines still in operating condition, at the Forest Museum here.

Eaton, 67, grandson of the founder of Eaton's of Canada, spent the day driving museum visitors, including 200 district school children, along the 1½-mile scenic route.

No rookie driver, the retired store magnate has driven many steam engines, and has a passenger-carrying model train of his own in Toronto. It's powered by a British-built steam engine called the Winston Churchill.

But the 50-year-old Shay was tops.

"Wonderful," said Eaton. "Outstanding."

PILOT GROUP MEETS MONDAY

PEP to Keep Parents Informed

DUNCAN — A parent Education Project is being formed in the Cowichan Valley to make parents more knowledgable about the education system.

Organizer of PEP, Mrs. Neil Campbell, Cowichan Parent-Teacher Federation president, anticipates a pilot group of about 15 people will be formed in the Cowichan Senior Secondary teachers' lounge at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Mrs. Campbell said other pilot groups are being formed in Vancouver, Burnaby and probably Richmond.

The project will involve two year's work and is expected to eventually cover 2,000 people in more than 80 B.C. school districts.

Mrs. Campbell said they would consider some of the major issues of modern education and answer the question of many people: "Why don't we have some kind of a program so we know what is going on in education?"

Four main topics to be studied are: pre-school education, curriculum, teaching methods, teaching and identification of "exceptional children."

STUDY ACTIVITIES

Members of PEP will study local school activities by attending school board meetings, observing selected classrooms and inviting local educators or well-infofmed laymen to meet them.

Mrs. Campbell said they will investigate changes people would like to see in the school district and how they can be achieved.

The program is sponsored by the B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation and five co-sponsoring bodies including B.C. Teachers' Federation, B.C. School Trustees' Association, the Educational Insititute of B.C., Koerner Foundation and the Vancouver Foundation.

As well as a professional consultant, Mrs. Campbell said the National Film Board and the University of British Columbia's extension department would also be involved in the study.

Mayne Island Merchants Aid Galiano Shoppers After Blaze

GALIANO ISLAND — Residents living on the south end of Galiano have started shopping on Mayne Island following a fire which destroyed two businesses. Mayne Island merchants have initiated a free delivery service, as well as a taxi boat to take shoppers to Mayne.

Les Walton was the owner of the grocery store. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Burton and Thelma Mathias owned the hardware store, situated on the ground floor of the building.

They don't know if they will start again, but Walton indicated he was prepared to do so if he had storage space.

Both businesses lost all their records.

The fire was first noticed by Madge Murphy from Galiano Lodge. Mrs. Murphy's son-in-law, Barry Smith, sounded the alarm.

Arms Scandal and More Violence May Renew Ancient Irish Hatreds

By The Associated Press

An arms smuggling scandal in the Republic of Ireland and a resurgence of violence in British-ruled Northern Ireland have threatened to aggravate ancient hatreds — and lead to greater violence.

Ireland's Prime Minister Jack Lynch recently fired two of his Cabinet ministers, claiming he had information implicating them in a plot with the outlawed Irish Republican Army to sneak arms to rebellious Catholics in Northern Ireland.

The revelation — and the ensuing debate — opened even wider the gap between moderates such as Lynch and extremists in his ruling Fianna Fail party who talk of "liberating" their Catholic brethren in the Protestant-dominated north.

Meanwhile, in Belfast, where trouble is always close to the surface, Protestants and Catholics resumed rioting just as observers were predicting another long, hot, violent summer.

Conor Cruise O'Brien, noted author and Irish parliamentarian, said he sensed in Northern Ireland "a vast sense of Protestant fanaticism" confronting the growing power of the illegal IRA. He predicted "a festival of destruction or slaughter next July or August."

At the root of the problem is the festering animosity and frustration of the Catholic minority in Northern Ireland — mirrored by an equally vehement Protestant extremist movement.

The two sides can be fairly symbolized by Bernadette Devlin, the angry, peppery Catholic member of Parliament, and the Rev. Ian Paisley, the outspokenly anti-Catholic leader who last month was elected to Northern Ireland's provincial parliament.

The Catholics claim, with some justification, that they are not getting their share of jobs, housing — or even votes. Protestants of Paisley's stamp retort that Northern Ireland's fairly moderate government is caving in to Catholic demands. The government has made some concessions to Catholics, mainly under pressure from London.

As in the Irish Republic, divisions are opening between moderates and extremists in Northern Ireland.

British troops keep the peace in Northern Ireland, acting as referees between the two communities. Twenty-seven British soldiers were injured in recent clashes.

Just before Prime Minister Lynch disclosed the arms smuggling plot — saying the conspirators planned to bring in arms from Europe under the guise of a regular military shipment — a 2,500-man British army force swept through Northern Ireland counties bordering on the Republic.

The army said the soldiers were looking for arms, but declined to reveal what they found.

In London police sources say IRA agents have been actively trying to buy small arms in England and Europe to smuggle in to their colleagues in Northern Ireland.

They say the IRA has succeeded in bringing in some arms — how many is not known.

Equestrian Land Reduced in Price

Oak Bay council has reduced its price to potential developers of the former Victoria Riding Academy land, to encourage more attractive use of the area.

Acting Mayor Douglas Watts told Monday's council meeting that an earlier closed meeting had set the price of the controversial 9½ acres at $3 per square yard. The normal rate for such land is $3.75 per square yard.

A committee of architects is working out details of a competition in which developers would submit proposals for the acreage. It was felt a lower initial land cost would encourage more attractive designs, less inhibited by initial cash outlay.

The bylaw rezoning and land for multiple dwellings has already been the subject of a stormy public meeting and an unsuccessful Supreme Court challenge.

RESTRICTIONS

The current bylaw restricts development to two nine-storey buildings, the remainder to be three-storey.

Ald. Alex Hendry, stressing that planners whould be given latitude in order to create more attractive designs, suggested the council might accept two nine-storey high-rises plus others in varying heights — "in which case we would have to go back to the public on the basis of the accepted design."

Asked by Ald. Ian Horne if the $3 figure would result in more density of buildings, Watts said: "The maximum density will be decided before the contest is set."

Over the objections of Horne and Ald. Brian Smith, council will reconsider a developer's bid to build a 23-suite condominium apartment at 1660 Prospect Place, which it had turned down after a public protest in March.

The developer, W. Jensen Construction Ltd., submitted a written bid to council Monday, stating that he had gathered 300 signatures in a supporting petition.

Municipal Administrator Ted Hart informed council that the developer had later phoned to ask that his bid be tabled until June 22 so that he could gather more "material."

Smith said he couldn't see why the matter should be kept alive when the developer had been told in March that there would be no apartment development in that area.

"Not a single member of the council was in favor. We all seemed to have the same view that the area was not suitable. We are under no legal duty to reconsider."

LOBBYING

Horne pointed out that the new submission was dated June 3.

"Since then there's been a certain amount of lobbying. Now before council has even had a chance to reconsider it they ask that it be tabled. There's a certain amount of jockeying for position going on. I'm very unhappy about the situation."

Hendry replied that not listening to the the developer would turn council into "a little kind of dictatorship."

Madeleine Is . . . In Vancouver's Gastown

VANCOUVER (CP) — A team of young Canadians have been making a feature-length film here, further adding to Vancouver's rapidly growing film industry.

The film, Madeleine Is . . . is being produced by Spring Releases Ltd., a British Columbia company, in association with Glen-Warren Productions, Ltd., an Ontario company which has also produced a feature film entitled Flick.

The cast is all drawn from Vancouver talent and is headed by Nicola Lipman who recently finished playing in the Vancouver Playhouse production of The Criminals. She turned down a leading role at Stratford to play Madeleine.

Most of the filming has been done in Vancouver's Gastown area.

Sylvia Spring, a young West Vancouver brunette, was given a Canadian Film Development Corporation grant of $15,000 to help her finance the feature.

Her short feature Madeleine — which forms a segment of the feature film — was given an Award of Merit at the Vancouver International Film Festival. Total budget for the film is only $100,000.

Harvey Sherman, representing Glen-Warren Productions of Toronto, in Vancouver as production manager, said he was enchanted with the area and particularly with the relaxed way of doing business.

Cameraman and director of cinematography is Doug McKay, who recently completed work for Jacques Cousteau's Underwater World.

Ross Barrett, leader of the Mock Duck music group, is composing an original score for Madeleine Is . . . and Leonard Cohen has said he will write a song for it.

"The Welcome Medium"

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

People are different in more ways than one, especially in their reactions to the temperature of the atmosphere and to heat and cold.

Look at kids going to school on a sunny morning in May, when the temperature is on the lower side and the air is chilly. Their arms and legs are bare and they don't mind it a bit. Their grandmothers would be chilled without a sweater or jacket and their parents would be less than comfortable without long sleeves to cover their forearms.

If one of your neighbors is inclined to be heavy, he likes the cold better than another neighbor who is thinner. But the thin neighbor can stand the heat better in summer because his body has more surface in proportion to the mass of air and this gives him a greater area for losing heat.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The temperature dropped to 35 at Smithers this morning as cool air from the Pacific continues to invade the province. Most regions will be cloudy today although there will be many sunny areas. Afternoon showers and possible thundershowers will develop in the interior. Skies will clear this evening as a ridge of high pressure moves inland and most areas are expected to be sunny on Thursday. Temperatures will continue on the cool side.

House Passes Bill To Protect Arctic

By JOHN HAY

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs gave the government's bill to overhaul the Canada Elections Act their reserved approval in the Commons Tuesday, but promised to offer amendments when the bill is given clause-by-clause study.

The House also passed the government's bill extending Canadian control over Arctic pollution to 100 miles offshore. The bill was later given first reading in the Senate.

The bill on electoral regulations, given second reading, would lower the minimum voting age in federal elections to 18 from 21, allow parties fielding at least 75 candidates to place their labels on the ballot, provide a system of proxy voting for prospectors, fishermen, mariners, students and the disabled, and extend the vote to public servants working abroad.

John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) voiced approval for the lowered voting age, but suggested that young people should earn their right to vote through mandatory public service. A citizenship test would follow.

Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey) said provisions for proxy voting should be extended to other groups who may be absent from their homes on election day.

PLAN EXPENSE STUDY

Government House Leader Donald S. Macdonald said a study of legislation on election expenses, proposed by Roland Godin (Creditiste—Portneuf) would be started by a special Commons committee before the summer recess, expected at the end of June.

The Arctic pollution bill received unanimous Commons approval after unsuccessful Conservative attempts to include a declaration of sovereignty in the bill.

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien said the unanimity of Commons approval of the bill had strengthened Canada's stand on Arctic pollution control in relations with the United States.

Cities Demanding Federal Action

By MARGARET BARNARD

HALIFAX (CP) — New and imaginative approaches to solve the growing pains of Canada's cities were demanded by speakers at the annual conference of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities here Tuesday.

David Lewis, deputy leader of the New Democratic Party, warned that further neglect of Canada's urban problems would bring disaster, and urged the federal government to provide "effective and imaginative action before it is too late."

He suggested a thorough revision of the base for municipal finance, a system of regional government, urban land assembly under public ownership and a totally new approach to government structures and relationships.

John Steel, city manager of Windsor, Ont., called for a national urban policy involving new approaches by municipal, provincial and federal governments.

Canada's lack of systematic policy of urban development is responsible for a grave housing shortage, a transportation problem, poverty, unemployment and serious regional disparity, he said.

NEEDED RESPONSIBILITY

Dr. Eric Beecroft, director of urban and regional studies at the University of Western Ontario, London, said local government needs to be given a responsible role in policy making as well as representation with provincial governments in constitutional discussions.

Transportation, pollution control and urbanization were among topics discussed at seminars Tuesday.

Today's sessions will include more seminars, resolutions, and an address by Robert Andras, federal minister responsible for housing. The conference concludes Thursday.

Philip Givens, Liberal member of Parliament for York West, asked during a panel discussion why the federation had not stormed Parliament and demanded stronger pollution control measures.

He said that although lip service is paid to pollution control across Canada, and especially in Ottawa, priority funds are not set aside for control on many fronts.

The possibility of appointing a federal minister to co-ordinate the various agencies involved with pollution control was being discussed in caucus, he said.

GOOD IDEA GOES UP IN SMOKE

CLIFFWOOD BEACH, N.J. (UPI) — Richard Walsh thought it was a good idea when he used 12 tons of scrap rubber tires, boots and other rubber products to build a 219-foot artificial bluff to control beach erosion at his home here.

But it caught fire May 27 and it took 150 firemen from seven companies to control the blaze.

After 25 Years, United Nations a Paradox

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — It was built on ideals, but has bred cynicism.

It speaks of the hopes of man, but it sees starvation, war and racial hatred.

It's dominated by the big powers, but offers a voice to the newest emerging country.

It has praised men who venture into space, but it can't clear the Suez canal.

It has heard noble thoughts, and has been warned it's drowning in a sea of words.

It is the United Nations, a quarter-century old this year.

Twenty-five years ago the representatives of 50 countries met in San Francisco as the Second World War was drawing to a close. Their objective was to work out the final details of a world organization dedicated to peace and prosperity for mankind.

After three months the representatives agreed on a charter and on Oct. 24, 1945, that charter came into effect.

Resolves Noble

The founding nations, and those that followed them, resolved to combine to accomplish the aims of an end to the "scourge of war" and to promote fundamental human rights, social progress, better standards of life and to "practise tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbors."

The ringing declarations of the charter were heady stuff for a world still staggering from the conflict that members of the predecessor organization, the League of Nations, had been unable to prevent.

The idea of a new organization had grown from a meeting of Allied representatives in London in 1941 through the Atlantic Charter of the same year and meetings in Washington—the Declaration of the UN by 26 Allies in 1942—Tehran and Dumbarton Oaks.

The founding fathers may have had some reservations. But for most of the world the new organization offered hope for the future.

Today, in the silver anniversary year, the "scourge of war" remains. Billions are being spent on armaments and only a fraction of that on aid to the needy. Few countries—Canada included—have met the UN goal of one per cent of the gross national product dedicated to helping the less fortunate.

Work for Control

The first order of business of the first General Assembly—partly on the initiative of Canada—in January, 1946, was control of nuclear armaments. Today the world still is struggling with the problem as nuclear stockpiles get larger and deadlier.

The UN was more or less successful with the first political problem before it, although the Soviet Union cast the first of more than 100 vetoes in the Security Council. That was when Iran demanded withdrawal of Soviet troops from her territory. The Russians cast their veto but withdrew their troops.

Since then its political record is a matter of debate. It has been learned that a country can defy the UN and live. It has been learned that the UN can be invaluable in a dispute, but settlements probably must be achieved elsewhere. In the words of Secretary-General U Thant, the UN still falls short of being a world parliament.

But, as this anniversary year moves on, many are expected to say that the existence of the UN probably prevented a third world war.

They will say that it is a place to meet, talk and negotiate; that words are better than bullets.

And they will point to the quiet progress of the UN and its associated agencies in the humanitarian field, in health, in law, in aid, in education, in labor, in conservation, in trade.

Problems Come Out

Problems are not often solved—some of the world's problems, population for instance, appear virtually to defy solution. But they are brought out for all to see and the greatest minds on earth can be directed at them.

The "Green Revolution," under which countries such as India are approaching self-sufficiency in domestically produced staples, was helped by the UN.

The late secretary-general Dag Hammarskjold is known to have felt that the Suez crisis of 1956 could have developed into a cataclysmic conflict had it not been for the UN.

If that is to be believed, perhaps the Suez period might be called the UN's finest hour. The General Assembly was called to deal with the invasion of Egypt by Israel, France and Britain because the veto-bound Security Council was unable to act. The General Assembly acted swiftly on the recommendation of Canada's Lester Pearson to send a UN force to the area.

For 10 years that force, created over the objections of the Soviet Union, kept what passed for peace in the area.

Its withdrawal by Thant still is a matter of controversy, and the whole question of peacekeeping brought the UN into crisis in the 1960s. Experts, including Canada, are still meeting to find an acceptable formula for UN peace forces.

Mid-East in Crisis

The Middle East was in crisis when the UN was born—Israel often is called a child of the UN—and it is today.

But every world crisis has touched this organization, and the UN has been directly involved in some of them. Some are fading into history: the Greek government's battle with communism; the birth pains of Indonesia, Nigeria, Tunis, Morocco and others; American landings in Lebanon, among others.

Others flare up periodically: the India-Pakistan dispute over Kashmir—Canadians still are members of the long-established observer force there—for instance.

Still others remain fresh: the Soviet invasions of Hungary and Czechoslovakia; the bitter days of The Congo peace force—more Canadians there—and the recriminations on UN force debt repayment afterward; the Korean War; the Cyprus dispute—Canadians there still.

The Vietnam war, which never came before the UN formally, has permeated the atmosphere here for years.

Meanwhile, the UN—a follower not a leader—has changed with the world. In the early days it virtually was the preserve of the West, with the Soviet Union forced to use the veto frequently to preserve its interests.

But as more countries entered the UN—many of them former colonies in Africa and Asia, and as governments changed, the balance swung away from the West. Thirty countries gained independence in Africa between 1960 and 1967 alone.

Could Swing Vote

The under-developed countries, those from Africa and Asia and Latin America, could join to swing any vote. So now the "Third World" holds the balance of power. And voting now is not always East vs. West. Sometimes it is North (the developed) vs. South (the undeveloped).

And there was another radical change. The arrival of the former colonies brought greater awareness of human rights to the UN. The anti-colonialist feeling reached a peak in 1960 when 43 Afro-Asian countries sponsored the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries.

The racial problems of southern Africa reached the UN first in 1947 when the UN tried to get the former German colony of South-West Africa back from South Africa, which held it under a League of Nations mandate. Now South African apartheid, Rhodesian independence and Portuguese colonies in Africa take much of the UN's time.

Technical assistance for the under-developed started early in UN history, but on a small scale. It grew with little direction.

Then came the "First Development Decade," now ending. It was designed to bring disjointed efforts together. For the first time the idea that the under-developed should get a portion of the gross national product of the developed was put forward.

Must Be Success

But the First Decade was at best only a partial success—many receiving countries said it was a failure. Now, with Canada deeply involved, preparations are being made for a Second Decade. Time, authorities say, is running out to help the needy. The Second Decade must be a success.

Meanwhile, as the UN meetings moved from London, to Lake Success, N.Y., and then to the modern buildings in Manhattan, there has been drama and some comedy.

For instance there was the unbelievable spectacle in 1960 of Nikita Khrushchev banging his shoe on his General Assembly desk to interrupt a speaker.

Much else has happened, including:

—Khrushchev's bitter debates with Hammarskjold, a man who believed he had the right to take independent action. The Soviet leader proposed his famous troika (three men) formula to run the UN instead of a single secretary-general.

—The drama of the Cuba missile crisis in 1962 when the then U.S. ambassador Adlai Stevenson leaned over his desk to tell an uncomfortable Soviet Ambassador Valerian A. Zorin that he would wait until "hell freezes over" for an answer on whether the Soviets were indeed putting missiles on Cuba.

—The bitter debates over the Soviet invasions of Hungary and Czechoslovakia, when the Security Council argued far into the night.

—The day in February, 1962, when blacks sympathetic to assassinated Patrice Lumumba, former Congo leader, charged into the Security Council chamber and a scuffle with members ensued.

What of the future of the UN? At the last session of the General Assembly the 126 members took an unprecedented look at themselves and were not happy at what they saw.

And there is the feeling that the UN can never be a true world organization until there is representation for the 800,000,000 people on the Chinese mainland. Observers say it will be years before the Communist Chinese are admitted here, however.

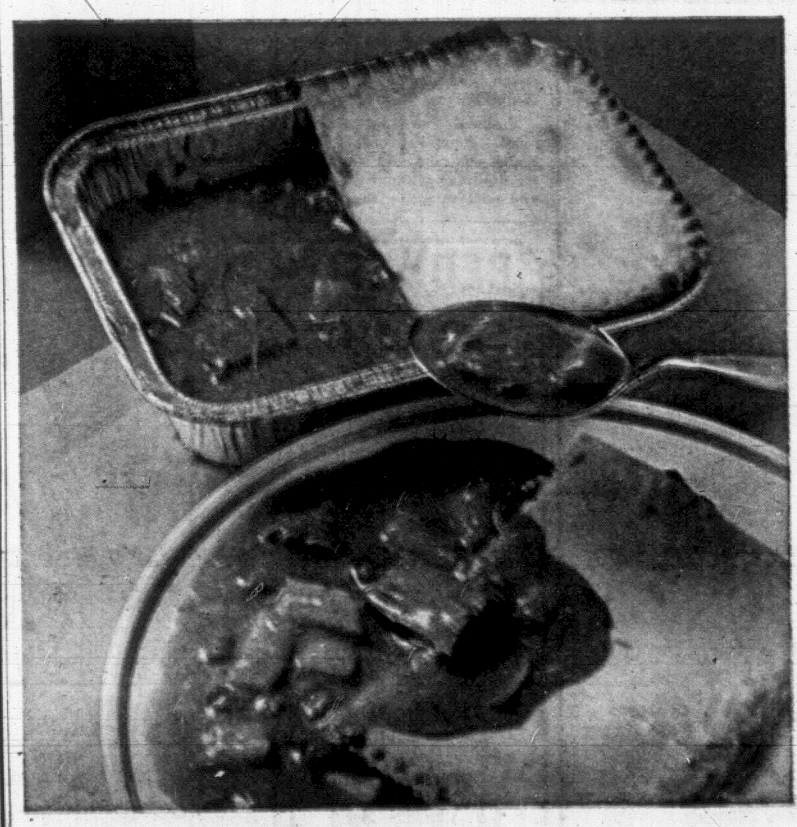
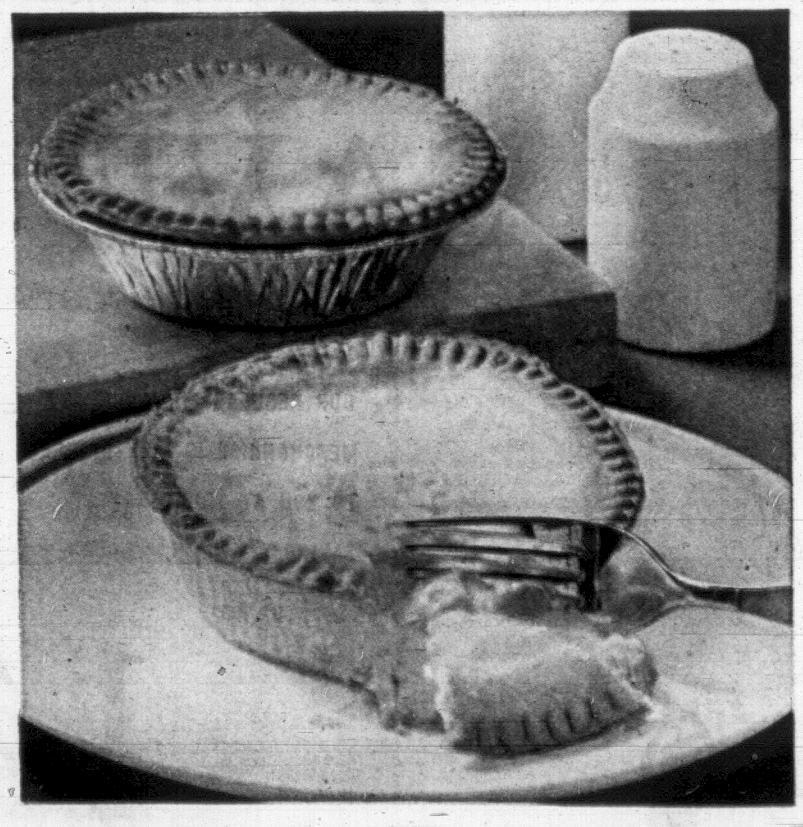
Good meat is a good part of every Swanson meat pie.



Deep-Dish Delightful:

There are three real husky he-man pies. We've shown Beef. Good, big pieces of beef in rich, brown gravy with lots of carrots, potatoes, and peas. Look for Turkey and Chicken, too. All with good meat, vegetables, and rich gravy topped by a flaky, golden Swanson crust made with enriched wheat flour.



Double-Crust Delicious:

Here's a Chicken pie that makes a perfect individual serving. And there's also Beef and Turkey to choose from. Inside good chicken, beef or turkey in a special rich Swanson gravy. All with lots of vegetables. And top, bottom and all around there's Swanson's special enriched crust. Golden, flaky delicious.

Death, Destruction Sweeps Before Plane

By ISAAC A. LEVI

LIMA (AP) — A grandstand view of death and destruction swept beneath a big United States C-130 cargo plane as it dropped supplies to survivors of earthquake-torn north central Peru.

"Unbelievable," said the pilot, Capt. Bill Hudspeth as he guided the big Hercules up the 80-mile Huaylas Canyon. "Worse than anything I have seen in my life."

Hudspeth shook his head in disbelief as the transport passed over what was left of Huaras, once a city of 50,000 at the southern entrance to the canyon, 180 miles north of Lima. Half the buildings had crumbled. Not a single roof remained intact.

The government says the earthquake a week ago may have killed 30,000 or more people; a United Nations observer says the count more likely will exceed 50,000. An estimated 100,000 more are homeless, injured or both.

AIRSTRIP SPARED

Hudspeth headed the giant craft 21 miles up the gorge to Anta, the target of the air-drop. Anta, a village of about 2,000, was devasted. But by some freak of terrain enough of the town's tiny airstrip was spared from avalanches that hurtled down the 18,000-foot Andes to leave it still usable by small aircraft.

A quarter ton of sleeping bags, blankets and food rations was packed in plastic-wrapped survival kits and stapled into 12 large crates. The back bay of the plane lifted open as Anta came into view and the crates were shoved out, two at a time, as the Hercules made six passes over the runway.

A few miles further up the canyon was Yungay, which used to be home for some 33,000 persons. All that could be seen of it were the tops of four palm trees where the town square had been and a statue of Christ, with arms outstretched, which marked the hilltop cemetery.

A slide of rocks and mud two to three miles wide had buried Yungay. Only about 2,500 residents are believed to have survived.

The C-130s fly twice a day, dropping supplies over the canyon then picking up survivors at the evacuation centre in Chimbote. They are brought there by heliopters and old C-47s that can just negotiate the little airfield at Anta.

More than half of Chimbote, a thriving industrial port of 80,000 persons is gone. Its fishmeal processing plant is partly ruined. Engineers estimated it will take many months to get Peru's only steel plant there to operate again.

But the undamaged airfield has been turned into headquarters for planes and rescue teams from 14 countries.

The air drops into Anta are part of a multi-million dollar U.S. relief effort. In addition to more than $1,000,000 spent on the drops during the first week after the quake, the United States has pledged $10,000,000 to help rebuild the shattered areas.

The Canadian government is providing six transport aircraft for relief flights.

"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause of your hair loss," says Harrison trichologist to balding man. Harrison directs the famous Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists, whose main office is in Vancouver. They are sending a specialist here to advise men and women how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

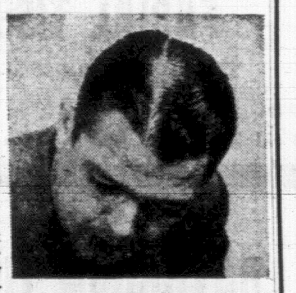
New home treatment methods for preventing baldness — and growing thicker hair — will be demonstrated in Victoria this Thursday and Friday, June 11 and 12.

This news was released here today by A. B. Harrison, internationally famous director of Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In the announcement, Harrison named Staff trichologist T. Cronshaw to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Cronshaw will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday at the Hotel Sussex.



Leonard A. Floyd before and after scalp treatment. Untouched photographs made four months apart.

Examine You Free

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Cronshaw," director Harrison said. "Your only obligation is to yourself—to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home Treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

"We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment," he pointed out. "There is no one cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that cause baldness."

Who Can Be Helped?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No," said Harrison sincerely. "We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison trichologists hold clinics in all major cities across Canada.

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do," declared Harrison. "But to over-come the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate—and baldish—by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist. He's 'tried everything'. So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair:

"That baldness is hereditary: that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years: that nothing can be done to stop hair loss — and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."

Free Scalp Examination

See Mr. Cronshaw in person. Learn how baldness can be corrected, and new hair grown. The new Harrison method permits you to actually correct your baldness and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Sussex Thursday or Friday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Cronshaw's suite number. You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

With No Work...Black Mike Feels His Age

Black Mike, a native of Serbia, passed his 100th birthday with so little fuss that few residents realized he was a centenarian.

He still lives alone in his log cabin, cooks his own meals, splits wood for his stove every day and walks downtown to visit friends or has a game of cards with his cronies at the fire hall.

In 1967 Black Mike went with friends to Vancouver and Victoria. During those three weeks he did not cut his own wood or go for daily walks, and found he was "feeling his age." The visit was cut short and Black Mike and friends hurried back to Dawson.

In 1900, he arrived in the Yukon after travelling by boat from Victoria to Skagway, Alaska, with gold rush stampeders. He worked as a special constable for the RCMP, bringing horses over the Dyea Pass to Dawson.

HOUSES STILL STAND

Black Mike did some mining in the Kondike creeks but in the end he found there was bigger, better and steadier money as a carpenter. He built houses which are still standing in Dawson. In recent years he restored the foundations of many local buildings, a job necessary annually because of the permafrost conditions. One of his special jobs was restoration of the Robert Service cabin, fixing the foundation and reinforcing the walls and roof without altering the appearance of the shrine to the northern poet.

Hunting, wood-cutting and trapping are among the other jobs Mike has done, and he still has a trapline.

About four years ago in November, Mike went hunting with another man. They shot a bear but had to get the dead animal across the icy waters of a river. When they got to their camp, they were soaked. His companion, a much younger man, caught pneumonia. It had no effect on the then 95-year-old Mike.

Mike says he has no recipe for longevity — but he continues to spit wood and walk daily.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1970 —PAGE 37

UNDERGROUND LINES for telephone services in Oak Bay have been stretched from the offices on Foul Bay Road to Oak Bay Ave., east to Newport to Currie Road. A B.C. Tel workman (above) guides one of the cables through a conduit. The cost of the conduit and cable placed underground (six reels of cable, each 1,500 feet long and containing 2,400 pairs of wires) is estimated at $250,000. These new cables, installed last week, will be used for the second phase of transferring over 5,000 customers in south Oak Bay from the Victoria exchange to the new Foul Bay Road office.

Negro Police to Aid Blacks

By ROBERT C. MAYNARD

ATLANTIC CITY (WP) — Declaring they are "no longer co-conspirators with white authority," members of the largest and oldest organization of black policemen in the United States decided here they will arrest any police officer they see abusing black citizens.

In a series of strongly-worded resolutions the National Council of Police Societies also called on President Nixon to lay down strict guidelines for police use of firearms, condemned their supervisors for laxity in the enforcement of narcotics laws in the black community and committed themselves to "change the racist behavior of white policemen since we cannot change their attitudes."

The society is the national association of a score of Negro police societies, many of whose members are veteran policemen in such cities as New York, Chicago, Newark, Atlanta, and Oakland, Calif.

Society meetings in the past have been largely social gatherings with a sprinkling of duscussion of such questions as how to encourage more Negroes to join police forces. But the society, according to one officer, is "running to catch up" with the increasing militant stand of the black community.

"The black policeman knows the same heel on his brother's neck leaves a heel-print on his own neck," said Howard Sheffey, chairman of the board and a New York City police sergeant.

"We will no longer be co-conspirators with white authority," Sheffey said, reading one of the society's resolutions. "We have resolved to rededicate ourselves to involvement in black community problems.

Giving a practical example of what the new stance means, Sheffey, assigned to Harlem, said, "If I see a white policeman beating a prisoner, I'll place him under arrest for assault."

Disturbed by the recent shootings at Jackson (Miss.) State College, in Augusta, Georgia and at Kent State University, the council called on the president and the department of justice to lay down a "sane firearms policy."

The organization placed the responsibility for protecting black citizens from excessive use of firearms on the black police officer himself. It advised black policemen witnessing excessive use of firearms to "take proper police action," meaning to arrest the offending officer.

The society, which represents 10,000 black policemen and policewomen, urged the adoption of the guidelines for the use of firearms recommended in 1966 by the task force on the police of the U.S. Crime Commission.

The guidelines recommend that deadly force should not be used against any suspect unless the arresting officer's safety or the safety of bystanders is endangered.

The crime commission recommended that deadly force should never be used "on mere suspicion" or against a felony suspect "when lesser force could be used."

Buyers' Strikes Lauded As Effective Power Force

SASKATOON (CP)—The same techniques used by unions in industrial relations can be applied by consumers, union leader William Dodge said Tuesday.

Mr. Dodge, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, told delegates to the Consumers' Association of Canada annual meeting that consumers are learning that boycotts, "or buyers' strikes", are effective means of exerting power.

He said consumers have not paid attention to their responsibilities because they have been brainwashed by advertising campaigns.

"We'll see you on the picket lines," he told about 200 association delegates and guests.

Mr. Dodge was one of four panelists responding to an address by freelance writer and broadcaster John Fisher who said consumers must organize and use their power.

Mr. Fisher, author of The Plot to Make You Buy, said the consumer organization will have to tackle broader aspects than just advertising, packaging, marketing and sales promotion gimmicks.

"Instead of tinkering with the so-called free-market economy, and telling people how to beat the system, we should be educating Canadians and Americans to the basic folly of our wasteful way of life."

Present-day consumerism in North America is built around relative abundance, he said. "But . . . our children's world will be one of scarcity—either self-imposed or externally-imposed."

Not all panelists agreed.

Jean de Grandpre, executive vice-president of Bell Canada in Montreal, said he believes in co-operation and a more rational approach to the problems of consumers.

Ernest Steele, president of the Grocery Products Manufacturers' of Canada, said that as the system for supplying wants and needs in society become more complex, there is greater need for consumer participation and concern.

Organization and power are needed, he said, but it must be responsible.

"The classic concept of a free-market economy is baloney."

All members of society should consider the exploitation of men, resources and labor under the present marketing system and the amount of waste created.

HOME GARDEN

June Is Busting Out All Over

By HILDA BEASTALL

June is when everything grows if it has any life within. It is the month too when we take long looks around to find a few more of those labor-saving, long-service shrubs and herbaceous perennials for our redesigned gardens.

Hilda

Remember? If we are to enjoy relaxing at home, our gardens need redesigning so that we are not continually surrounded and faced with jobs waiting to be done.

In June we have a fine long flowering perennial to add to the sunny edge of a tree shaded corner.

Tradescantia virginiana, with the common name of Virginian Spiderwort, has lovely three-petalled, violet-blue flowers centered with gold tipped anthers. Flowers open one at a time at the ends of 15-inch leafy stems.

A glamorous pure white variety with white anthers has an even larger spread to its blossoms, measuring an inch across the three-petalled triangle. Pauline, a pink, is listed but this I have not grown.

These tradescantias like an ordinary garden soil and once planted, will grow into large clumps which will need division after eight years or so.

They continue blooming until frost in September or October, when old foliage and flower stems are cut back half way to leave the remainder as protection until new growth starts in spring.

Towards the end of the flowering period with the first stems of buds, it helps to sacrifice the last few. So cut the stem off even though three or four buds remain unopened. This little attention together with an occasional deep watering, encourages new flower stems to keep interest in the planting for the full season.

Another tradescantia having several varieties and forms is grown only as a house plant. It trails and wanders around with various names as Wandering Sailor, Wandering Jew, may be either all green in the leaf, or variegated with pale cream or having dark purple reverse. Only occasionally seen with flowers.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

The extreme extent to which an expert will go to assure the safety of a contract is vividly demonstrated in the hand presented today. The deal occurred in a recent rubber-bridge game. Sitting South was Life Master Nancy Gruver, of Ellicott City, Md.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

Mrs. Gruver won the opening heart lead with dummy's queen, after which she led a club to her ace. She then played her remaining club, and when West followed with the seven-spot, dummy's 10 was inserted. As is apparent, the 10-spot won the trick. Twelve tricks were now there for the taking.

Actually, when play had ended, declarer had taken all 13 tricks, for East was squeezed. On the king, queen, and 10 of clubs, East discarded three diamonds. But when South next cashed the queen, king, and ace of diamonds, East had problems finding two discards.

His first discard was a spade, but on the third diamond lead he had to part with either another spade (which would create a spade winner for declarer) or a heart, which would promote South's fourth heart into a winning trick. (On the king and queen of clubs, South had discarded the three and five of spades.)

What motivated Mrs. Gruver to finesse the 10 of clubs? Basically, it was the natural desire to fulfill her contract. If West had the jack of clubs, then the finesse guaranteed success. And if the 10 of clubs happened to lose to East's (hypothetical) jack, then it meant that the adversely held six clubs were divided no worse than 4-2.

Thus, if dummy's 10 of clubs had been captured by East's jack, then when declarer regained the lead, he would cash the king and queen of clubs. The board's fifth club would now become declarer's slam-going trick.

There might be those who will point out that declarer could have made her contract via a squeeze even if she had not finessed the club 10. True. But anyone who would not finesse the club 10 would probably not be familiar with squeezes.

YOUR HEALTH

Two Different Types of Anemia

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

There are two main types of anemia (Greek an meaning without or lacking, and haima meaning blood); the one is called primary anemia and the other is secondary anemia. A primary anemia is based probably on a hereditary tendency, and is associated with a lack of acid in the gastric juice of the stomach. In the old days, persons with a primary anemia petered out and died, because we did not know the cause, and as a result, had no treatment.

Then it was discovered that an extract of liver would cure the patient, and later the essential chemical was found to be vitamin B12. This is so powerful that in many cases one tiny does of it, taken once a month, will keep the patient in good health.

Early symptoms of pernicious anemia are feelings of weakness, numbness or tingling in the hands or legs, and a sore tongue. Usually, with one glance through a microscope at a slide carrying a drop of the person's blood, an expert can recognize a primary or pernicious anemia.

Similarly, one glance at a stained smear of blood may tell an expert that he is dealing with a secondary anemia, that is, one due usually to the loss of a good deal of blood from bleeding somewhere in the body, perhaps from bleeding piles, or from a bleeding ulcer of the stomach, or from a big, bleeding, but perhaps not at all painful, cancer of the cecum (the first portion of the large bowel, on the right side of the lower half of the abdomen). The person with secondary anemia due to a gastric ulcer may have noticed stools that are dark, because of quantities of digested blood.

It is very important, immediately after the diagnosis of secondary anemia is made, to find out where the point of bleeding, before giving the bleeding, befreo giving the person iron. Then iron can be helpful.

The person with even a severe secondary anemia may not have any symptoms of which he is aware.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Railway Promoters Made Fortunes

By BOB BOWMAN

In 1850 there were only 66 miles of railway operating in British North American, but more than 9,000 miles of track had been laid in the U.S.A. One reason for the disparity was that British North America had better water transportation. However, it was realized that railway building must be stimulated and so the government of Canada agreed to guarantee the interest on bonds on new railways more than 75 miles long.

The effect was magical. Railways began springing up throughout Upper and Lower Canada. Small communities borrowed huge sums of money. For instance, on June 10, 1857, Brantford, with a population of 5,000, borrowed $500,000 to build a railway. Cobourg borrowed another half-million, while nearby Port Hope got $740,000.

The new railways had to begin somewhere but they often ended in the bush. People made fortunes. The system was to form a company, retain the controlling interest, and sell the remainder of the shares to the public. Then the railway companies would form their own construction companies and see that they did the work at fat profits. Clever promoters could do this without risking a nickel of their own money. In 10 years they built more than 2,000 miles of railways, mostly in Upper Canada.

The politicians were in the racket. Sir Allan MacNab, for instance, was Leader of the Opposition, and also chairman of Canada's Railway Commission. W. G. Hardy in "From Sea Unto Sea" describes him listening sympathetically to a plea for government help from Sir Allan MacNab, president of the Great Western Railway. A. T. Galt, who became a leading Father of Confederation, made a furtune from railway building, as did many others.

Other events on June 10:

By J A H HUNTER

She'd examined them all. Fingered, prodded, and squeezed. And now at last Mrs. Pothersniff had found a steak to her liking. "How much?" she asked Sam, who had waited patiently.

The old man was ready. "It'll cost you just one dollar less than a chop and a half would cost if two chops and a half cost a dollar less than three steaks like that would cost."

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MUSIC HALL. 7:30 p.m., Channel 8; 9 p.m., Channel 12. Another British show with American seasoning as host Des O'Connor welcomes Carol Lawrence and Bob Denver. Another guest is top British comedian Val Doonican, making his American TV debut and singing the kind of songs the British public knows him for such as "Agricultural Irish Girl." Carol sings and dances and appears in an amusing sketch with Des and Bob about a husband using a friend as an alibi for a late night out on the town.

THE VIRGINIAN. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5 (repeat). This was the first show of the 1964 season and it was written to introduce Clu Gulager as a new regular on the show. As with most newcomers to westerns, Clu arrives on the scene as a gunfighter and ends up as a deputy sheriff. The plot finds the gunfighter proving his innate goodness by saving a rancher.

SPECIAL. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7, 12. You're in Love, Charlie Brown (repeat). One of the better efforts in this occasional cartoon series by Charles Schultz thanks to a solid storyline about round-faced, love-smarting Charlie Brown. He goes through all kinds of torment trying to get up nerve enough to talk to a little red-haired girl, and he receives scant help from his dog, Snoopy, and friends.

ROOM 222. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. Fathers and Sons (repeat). A good show that takes a look at a father and son who shout at each other over the generation gap until teacher Dixon steps in. Perhaps this half hour oversimplifies the enormous problem of parent-child alienation, but the story about an obstinate doctor and his socially aware son gets a few important things said.

MEDICAL CENTER. 9 p.m., Channel 12 (repeat). France Nuyen and Chad Everett carry the brunt of this hospital drama, and their personal appeal gets the job done. As an injured Vietnamese brought here for sugrery, Miss Nuyen alternates between sullen suspicion and child-like delight, thanks to Doc Gannon's attention. Once again, Everett as Gannon battles doctors and even army personnel to help the girl, and his small wars contribute most of the drama and spark.

HAWAII FIVE-O. 10 p.m., Channel 12 (repeat). Excellent windup for the two-parter about a flourishing quack doctor in Southern California. An angry McGarrett tries to pin a murder rap on the lady doctor and he comes close, only to be defeated in the end by an unexpected TV plot twist that will startle the viewer. Resigned to defeat, he stages a surprising courtroom trick of his own hoping to save the day. Leonard Freeman's storyline is most effective and the acting by Jack Lord, Joanne Linville, Bill Schallert and, particularly Beah Richards, deserves an A rating.

COMEDY CRACKERS. 10:30 p.m., Channel 2. Comics Max Ferguson, Roy Wordsworth and Veronique le Flaguais are the guests. Front Page Challenge, prime ministerial interviews and the B and B pub are targets for their wit.

Eye Examination at 40 Could Prevent Blindness

By DON VIPOND

Everyone should have at least one medical eye examination around age 40 to guard against glaucoma, a prominent ophthalmologist said in Victoria Tuesday.

The disease is insidious because those infected don't notice any problems for the first seven or eight years, said Dr. Michel Mathieu of Montreal. By that time glaucoma is well advanced.

It is associated with raised pressure in the eye and if untreated will produce blindness. Detected early, it can be controlled and its earliest signs can be spotted in a routine examination by an ophthalmologist.

SEVERAL KINDS

Glaucoma exists in several forms but the most common attacks two out of 100 adults over 40.

Mathieu is president of the Canadian Ophthalmological Society which is holding its 33rd annual meeting at The Empress this week. Over 200 doctors, eye specialists from across Canada, are attending.

Internationally known for his work in corneal disease, he has conducted an average of two corneal transplants a week for the last 20 years.

THE WINDOW

The cornea is the window of the eye, the clear area on the outer coat which allows light to be transmitted through it.

Corneal transplants came long before transplantations of organs of the body. Mathieu estimates an overall success rate of about 50 per cent. With some forms of eye ailments, success reaches 90 per cent.

Among the most recent major advances in eye treatment he lists fluoresceine angiography, a diagnostic technique in which a dye injected into the bloodstream rapidly covers vessels on the back of the eye.

This allows doctors to see much tinier lesions and spot other problems more readily. One form of treating lesions is to burn them away using an intense beam of light.

SMALL AREA

How do eye surgeons work in such a restricted area as the eye? Mathieu says operating using a microscope enables them to do much more detailed work, use finer sutures and instruments.

"If you bring the old type of instruments under the microscope they look as big as a pick and shovel."

The supply of corneas for transplants is still well below the need and more must be done to inform the public of the problem, said Mathieu. The Canadian National Institute fo the Blind has an education program aimed in this direction.

In the past when a cornea donation was available, the operation had to proceed rapidly. But methods of preserving corneas in liquid nitrogen for months have been developed.

NOT POSSIBLE

Mathieu said entire eye transplants are impossible and as far as medical science can see at the moment will remain so. The reason is the optic nerve at the back of the eye would have to be cut and it won't regenerate. Some types of nerves will but not those that are part of the brain. For that reason brain transplants are out, too.

The annual meeting this week will see 44 papers presented and quite a few others had to be put off for lack of time, said Mathieu. This contrasts with the total of 19 papers presented at the annual meeting 10 years ago.

DUNCAN — City council has asked for the co-operation of the junior and senior Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' Association in a proposed clean-up, paint-up campaign in Duncan.

When he presented the suggestion to council Monday evening, Mayor Jim Quaife said there are at least 20 properties that are uninhabitable.

Canada Joins Mutton Ban

CANBERRA (Reuters) — Canada has placed a ban on Australian mutton imports, Primary Industry Minister Douglas Anothony told Parliament today.

Anthony said the Canadian ban and an earlier ban placed by United States' authorities on Australian mutton would affect about 40 per cent of Australia's mutton exports.

Canada imposed the ban for the same reason as the American authorities—the presence of some organisms in the mutton.

The organisms were not considered harmful to humans, the minister said.

"The Canadian minister for agriculture has informed us that no further shipments of mutton from Australia will be permitted entry until inspection standards have been brought up to U. S. standards," Anthony said.

Building Pace Down Sharply

Construction activity almost collapsed in Central Saanich in May.

Permits worth only $95,764 were issued, compared with $983,660 in May, 1969.

For the first five months, permits worth $860,403 were issued compared with $1,427,560 in the same period last year.

Sidney building permits were down for May and the first five months.

In May, the value was $194,370 compared with $671,876 in the same month last year.

2-Year Sentence for Theft Of Ball-Point Pen and $9

Edwin Carl Usher, 54, of a downtown hotel, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary Tuesday by Judge William Ostler in provincial court.

He was seen leaving the building by cleaning women, and it was subsequently determined that $4 in American coin, approximately $5 Canadian money and a ball point pen were missing.

Usher, who claimed he was in a beer parlor at the time of the offence, was identified by the cleaning women and picked from a police line-up.

He had been released from prison March 13 after serving time on a previous conviction in Vancouver, and said he was in Victoria looking for work.

Jordan War Intensifies

Times News Services

The Arab guerrilla revolt against the Jordanian government continued to rage in the streets of Amman, the capital, today despite an announced ceasefire pact reached between King Hussein and rebel leader Yasir Arafat, head of the commandos' supreme council.

A dispatch received in Washington just before noon said all telephone and electric power service has failed in the Jordanian capital, and gunfire in the streets has made it impossible to remain outside.

Guerrilla sources in Lebanon said the government troops, some of which had been pulled back from the Jordan River-Israel front to deal with the insurrection, were shelling all areas inhabited by Palestinian Arabs, including refugee camps.

The Arab revolt, which exploded into open warfare Tuesday, is being led by guerrilla extremists who seek a more aggressive stance by Jordan against Israel.

A spokesman of Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla organization in the Middle East, said in Beirut that there had been scores of casualties, including women and children, in the bombardment of one camp that is the site of the headquarters of the radical popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Observers in Lebanon said it seemed that the situation was deteriorating into an all-out fight between extremist elements on both sides, with the moderates, represented by the king and Arafat,

AMMAN (AP) — Amman Radio tonight announced fighting had ended in the streets of this Jordanian capital. Confirmation of the report was awaited from the guerrilla forces.

U.S. ATTACHE SLAIN BY ARAB GUERRILLAS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) — Palestinian Arab guerrillas burst into the home of the U.S. military attache in Amman, Jordan, Maj. Robert P. Perry, today and killed him with a burst of automatic fire, travellers reaching Beirut said.

The travellers had their information from American sources at the American embassy, which was itself under sniper fire today.

Towboat Men Vote on Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Some 400 west coast towboats and their 1,150 officers and engineers could be back at work early next week if a contract settlement endorsed by union negotiators is accepted by the membership.

Result of voting by the members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild on the offer, reported to be 26 per cent over 2½ years, is expected by Friday night.

Federal mediator William Kelly said the settlement will bring about "major improvements in the working conditions of the towboat men."

"It will drastically reduce the hours of duty required of the masters and officers which have been bitterly complained about."

Provision of a minimum six-man crew on all large, continuously-operating tugs, which at one time was a main union demand, is believed not included in the offer.

DISPUTE HEARD

Meanwhile, a conciliation board is hearing a dispute between the British Columbia Towboat Owners Association, which represents 53 companies, and the Seafarers International Union which has 250 members working on the tugs.

The association said Tuesday, however, that the SIU "generally goes along with what the guild gets." Current guild pay rates range from $583 a month for the mate of a small tug to $980 for the captain of a large one.

Increases for these categories will range from $170 a month to $268. New regulations, covering most of the bitterly-fought safety issues including design and construction of the boats, accommodation and work practices, are to be announced in the Commons today by Transport Minister Don Jamieson.

In another development, an appeal was launched Tuesday against the six-month jail sentence imposed on chief guild negotiator Capt. Arnie Davis last Thursday for contempt of a B.C. supreme court injunction banning picketing.

The appeal claimed that the contempt order didn't state whether proceedings were criminal or civil, didn't disclose whether any rules applied to the proceedings and that it was made ex parte, in the absence of Capt. Davis.

20,000 JOBLESS

The strike which started May 3 has thrown out of work 20,000 men in the forest industry, either through layoffs because of lack of raw materials usually handled by tugs, or because they refuse to cross towboat picket lines.

It followed nine months of negotiations and rejection of a 21 per cent pay increase over three years. A secret DOT report leaked to the press by the guild stated 80 per cent of

Only Food Vouchers Granted Jobless

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi has decided to grant limited assistance — food vouchers — to families made destitute by labor disputes.

The announcement that directives had been sent to welfare offices on Tuesday morning was made by deputy minister E. R. Rickinson Tuesday afternoon to leaders of more than 200 jobless men from Cowichan Valley protesting in front of the Legislative Buildings.

To qualify for the vouchers, idled workers will have to prove they are destitute and that they are ineligible for unemployment insurance, register with the federal manpower department to show there is no job for them and fill in the usual application forms for social assistance.

Rickinson stressed that only food vouchers will be issued, not cash, as is the case for most welfare recipients.

Rickinson also informed demonstration leaders, which included Robert Strachan, MLA for Cowichan-Malahat, that Gaglardi, who was out of town, would meet them Thursday at 1:30 p.m.

One of the organizers of the demonstration, Fermie Viala, vice-president of the Duncan local of the International Woodworkers of America, said they would press for full welfare assistance for workers laid-off or locked out in labor disputes.

SECOND-CLASS CITIZENS

"We want to be eligible for welfare as any other destitute person. To give us vouchers for food only, while others get welfare cheques, makes us second-class citizens," Viala said.

Viala said that he and leaders of the Carpenters Union and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada would also try to meet Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Thursday afternoon to protest B.C.'s labor laws. Peterson was out of town Tuesday afternoon.

When Viala and Strachan informed the demonstrators of the food voucher announcement, several voiced unhappiness that the protest had accomplished so little.

BETTER DO SOMETHING

"There better be a lot of cheques ready tomorrow," yelled another.

"Bring the parasites (Gaglardi and Peterson) out," demanded another.

Under the urging of the leaders, the demonstrators, still muttering, gradually broke up.

The demonstration began as a motorcade from Duncan. It stopped briefly at the Ocean Cement plant at Bamberton where Strachan met company officials and failed to persuade them to end their ban on cement sales throughout the province.

CARRY PLACARDS

PROTEST JAILING

Strachan told the demonstrators they were there to protest the jailing of Capt. Arnie Davis, chief negotiator for the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, to urge humane labor laws to get the correct interpretation and use of welfare legislation and "to focus attention on the current social crisis" created by the labor disputes.

OIL LEAK FEARED WATERFOWL THREAT

EDMONTON (CP) — Oil from a broken pipeline at Fort McMurray could cause "considerable damage" to waterfowl 150 miles downstream on the Athabasca River, an Alberta government official said today.

Particles of oil from the pipeline break were believed by officials to be entering the Athabasca Delta where the river flows into Lake Athabasca.

"It doesn't look good," said Al Boggs, district officer with the fish and wildlife division at Fort McMurray, 230 miles north of Edmonton. "Considerable damage could be done to waterfowl."

250 Young People Take Over Hotel

SASKATOON (CP) — Between 250 and 300 young people took control of the downtown Bessborough Hotel Tuesday night and served themselves beer after management closed off the taps.

It was the second demonstration at the publicly-owned Canadian National Railways hotel this week.

The demonstrators, protesting the hotel's new rulings on appearance and dress, stood on tables, taunted police and tore windows from their hinges in the barroom.

City police and RCMP were on hand but made no arrests. A police spokesman said no police action could be taken unless requested by the management.

Shortly after the young people marched on the hotel—about 8 p.m. CST — George McCabe, hotel manager, ordered the bar shut down. But the crowd, which overflowed into the lobby, helped themselves to pickled eggs, opened the beer taps and formed a beer line.

At one point a loud speaker was brought in and was used to shout insults at the hotel management.

The demonstrators left at 11:30 p.m. promising to return for a "sleep-in" tonight.

Monday night about 200 young people invaded the beverage room and the liquor lounge after some persons were ejected for not conforming to dress regulations.

N.Y. Police Station Bombed

NEW YORK (AP) — Seventeen minutes after an anonymous caller telephoned a bomb threat, a powerful dynamite blast ripped through the second floor of police headquarters Tuesday night.

Eight persons were injured, none seriously.

LITTLE ROOM FOR COMPROMISE IN POST TALKS

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Treasury board and postal union negotiators postponed today's scheduled bargaining meeting, saying they need more time to prepare their positions.

Spokesmen for both sides said the delay was mutually agreed on and they will meet at 10:30 a.m. Thursday rather than today. Meantime, both sides will caucus separately to prepare future bargaining strategy.

During Tuesday, when both parties met face-to-face for 2½ hours, it became clear that the government's program of wage restraint leaves treasury board and the unions with little room for a compromise.

In Toronto, 2,669 postal employees were back on the job after striking the post office Tuesday. Workers in Windsor, Ont., joined the return to work after staying home Tuesday for the 11th day after a one-day return on Monday.

Postmen held a meeting Monday with William Dodge, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, to discuss the federal government's 6 per cent boost guidelines. Further talks are planned.

NORTH VIETS CAPTURE KEY TOWN

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — North Vietnamese troops have occupied the last major government-controlled town in southern Laos, informed sources said today.

They said the North Vietnamese captured the key town of Saravane Tuesday.

Showdown Vote Set Over War

Times News Services

The U.S. Senate today is preparing for a showdown vote Thursday on a Nixon-backed resolution which would allow President Nixon, without approval of the U.S. Congress, to send troops back into Cambodia after the July 1 deadline.

A close vote is expected and the administration believes it has the support to pass the resolution.

Sens. Mike Mansfield (D — Mont.), Frank Church (D — Idaho) and John Sherman Cooper (R — Ky.) called the administration-backed move the equivalent of a new "Gulf of Tonkin Resolution" which would allow the president to take any war action in Cambodia he wishes and would nullify the Cooper-Church amendment. The latter denies funds for further U.S. operations in Cambodia after July 1 without the prior consent of Congress.

On the war front, Cambodian troops pushed back North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops from around the provincial capital of Siem Reap, 185 miles northwest of Phnom Penh.

'MUST LOWER EXCESSIVE COSTS'

Basford Vows Drug Action

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford hinted today at direct federal intervention to bring down retail drug prices if co-operative efforts with the provinces fail to work.

"However unpleasant it might be to intervene more directly in the market place, it may prove necessary, in order to meet the paramount objective—lowering of excessive costs," he said.

"Needless to say, it would be preferable to cure the ills of the market place through voluntary co-operation, imaginative streamlining of techniques and broad competitive forces."

Mr. Basford made the statements at a closed meeting of federal and provincial government officials. A text of his statement was distributed outside the meeting.

"I am convinced that the level of prices for prescription drugs is too high," he said in reporting on a just-concluded survey in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Mr. Basford said the survey of 19 commonly prescribed drugs at 10 drugstores in each city shows "that more competitive practices could lead to significant reductions in prices."

He said the consumer affairs department will maintain close scrutiny over price movements through industry price lists as well as through existing statistical indexes.

Mr. Basford told the meeting that recent steps to weaken patent protection enjoyed by some drugs had resulted in remarkable results in lowering drug prices.

The federal patent commissioner had issued licences to im-

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Gordon Gibson, of Vancouver, executive assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau, is at the head of a parade of several executive assistants, special assistants and other staff people planning to leave the government service this summer.

The departures — 10 in number according to latest count — have given rise to rumors that there is some unhappiness behind the scenes in the executive suites on Parliament Hill.

The rumors reached the floor of the Commons Tuesday when G. W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) asked: "Would the prime minister make a statement in connection with the alleged resignation of seven ministerial assistants because of the autocratic rule of the prime minister?"

Opposition members banged their desks in applause. Last year Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield's office who decided they had served long enough on Parliament Hill and resigned to take other posts in private business.

At the time the Liberals asked questions in the House about "trouble" in the opposition leaders' office.

In addition to Gibson, who has told many people in Ottawa that he plans to leave the prime minister's staff this summer, James Wightman of the prime minister's press office, is understood to be planning a move.

Both Gibson and Wightman have been with the prime minister since he was elected to that office. Wightman served as a press officer with former prime minister L. B. Pearson.

Among the executive assistants and special assistants planning to leave this summer are Robert McDowell, special assistant to services and supply minister James Richardson of Winnipeg; Tom Brett, executive assistant to government leader in the Senate, Paul Martin; Richard Hayes, executive assistant to Justice Minister John Turner; Blair William and Michael Barry, assistants to Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson; and Robert Wong, special assistant to Health and Welfare Minister John Munro.

One such drug, diazepam, a tranquillizer, now was being quoted at a suggested retail price 30 per cent below a competitor.

He said he is told that for another tranquillizer, chlordiazepoxide, a similar sharp reduction took place. One drug industry estimate was that hospitals and governments would be saved $950,000 a year as a result of price competition in this drug alone.

Mr. Basford said the federal government's role in dealing with the high cost of retail drug distribution is mainly that of a catalyst.

But, if any part of the federal program "fails to measure up to expectations, either through inadequacy or lack of support, other steps must be contemplated."

He followed this remark with a reference to direct intervention. He said the federal combines investigation branch has a role in maintaining competitive practices. The consumers branch would facilitate competition by informing consumers.

"It is our intention to foster the greatest possible degree of competition consistent with the highest standards of health care and physical safety."

Japanese Smelter Proposal Seen

Mines Minister Frank Richter expects Japanese interests to propose a copper smelter for B.C. within two months but he isn't sure it will meet the province's pollution control standards.

Interviewed on his return from Japan, Richter said he received inquiries about establishment of a smelter from a Japanese consortium.

"The question of pollution control may be a very substantial factor on which a decision will finally be made," he said, adding that a meeting here with the Japanese interests may take place before long.

POLLUTION FACTOR

Premier Bennett said last week that the province is still seeking establishment of a smelter but will only approve one if pollution standards are met.

Richter, who stayed over in Japan after attending Osaka '70 ceremonies with Bennett, was asked about rumors of new oil drilling applications in Georgia Strait.

No applications have been received from any company, he said, suggesting the oil industry is "looking for safer bets" right now.

DAVIS WARNING

He said the warning by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis that Ottawa will not allow drilling in the strait does not appear to have been a major factor in the lack of interest by oil companies.

Drilling in coastal waters generally as well as the strait appears to be "a dead issue" right now, he said.

Europe Trip Follows Retirement

After 46 years in the newspaper business, compositor William Mason, 2369 Musgrave in Oak Bay, has retired.

He left Tuesday on a six-week vacation in Europe with his wife, Nora.

He started work as a reporter with the Colonist at the age of 17, earning the princely sum of $15 a week.

Better pay in the printing department made Mason decide on a change. After completing his apprenticeship, he left in 1932 to travel in the United States.

After a stint in the printing shop of the Detroit Times, he returned to Victoria, in 1928, signing on with the Victoria Times.

When the Times and the Colonist amalgamated in 1951, becoming Victoria Press Ltd., Mason remained on staff, working with both papers.

He was presented with a camera by his fellow workers.

THE WEATHER

There will be sunshine for Victorians Thursday.

The weather office at Victoria International Airport also forecast southwesterly winds at 15 m.p.h. or less.

Temperatures are expected to reach an overnight low of 45 with a high of 62 Thursday. But they may reach 65 or 70 in areas protected from the wind.

Weather statistics are on Page 31.

Driver Jailed, Cabbie Hurt in Flaming Crash

Bruce Lief Erikson, 26, of Vancouver, was sentenced to 14 days in prison and had his licence suspended for a year in provincial court this morning.

Erikson was charged with dangerous driving Tuesday night following a flaming two-car collision at the intersection of Quadra and Fort at 11:30 p.m.

Eriskon pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler on the Criminal Code charge. He admitted to police after the crash that he ran a red light while travelling up Fort Street at about 45 miles per hour.

HIT HYDRANT

His car was in collision with a taxi, and after impact the vehicles spun across the intersection, bending a steel traffic signal post and shearing off a fire hydrant.

The taxi burst into flames immediately after the collision, but quick work by passers-by got victims out of the wreckage and around a corner, away from the flames.

Eleanor Kairez, 19, of 3335 Midland, Oak Bay, a passenger in Baker's taxi, was treated for leg cuts and released from Royal Jubilee Hospital.

An unidentified passenger in Erikson's car was unhurt.

'BEAT LIGHT'

Police reported Erikson told them he knew the light was red but that he though "he could beat the light and the other car."

"That sort of horsing around can lead to a person's death," Ostler told Erikson before passing sentence.

City police were assisted by two fire trucks, two ambulances and city waterworks and engineers staff.

unable to enforce obedience o the ceasefire.

The Popular Front said, meanwhile, it would not be responsible for the lives of 32 foreigners, held hostage in an Amman hotel, if there were further attacks on refugee camps.

A spokesman for the front said earlier that the hostages were in no danger.

Amman radio said that joint Palestinian-Jordanian patrols were moving therough the streets of Amman to enforce the case-fire. But there was no confirmation of this from the commando side.

A Popular Front spokesman said in Beurut that the organization rejects compromise solutions and unclear promises and demands implementation of a four-point program that includes dismissal from the positions of authority of all anti-commando elements and release of all commandoes from detention.

IGNORE CEASEFIRE

All day Amman radio broadcast an announcement of a ceasefire agreement concluded by King Hussein and Arafat in early-morning talks at the royal palace attended by a powerful Iraqi delegation.

But the ceasefire call was ignored, as were repeated radio appeals for calm and a return to normal.

"While labor is penalized by the courts for secondary picketing, management is allowed to get away with the same thing without hindrance.

"I don't see anybody throwing Gaglardi in jail for breaking the law of the land," Strachan said, referring to the welfare minister's refusals to grant welfare to locked-out and laid-off workers.

Jogging Kills Two

MANILA (AP) — A 34-year-old veteran of the Manila police force collapsed and died Monday after an hour of jogging. His was the second death blamed on the physical fitness program Mayor Antonio Villegas started May 11 for the force. The jogger, 59-year-old Detective Sgt. Antonio Gomez, died of heart failure, the police department said. It blamed his death on the daily exercise.

SAN JOSE (Reuters) — Former Costa Rica president Rafael Angel Calderon Guardia died after a two-month illness. He was 72. Calderon, president from 1944-48, was also head of the opposition Republican party.

Festival Reports $500 Profit

The Greater Victoria Music Festival ended up $500 in the black after spending $9,916 in 1970, the treasurer reported to the annual meeting of the festival association Tuesday.

And it will begin its new year with $1,249 in the bank compared with just $777 a year ago.

It had been a good year but "we must not relax our efforts or be over optimistic" warned Walter Kitley in his presidential report.

He told the well-attended meeting at the Conservatory of Music that cost of running the festival would inevitably rise in 1971 with the necessity of bringing in more adjudicators to cope with big classes and rental of additional halls.

The following executive and board of directors was elected for the ensuing year.

Bill WALKER

This was to be a pleasant relief from reality. The daily chores were to be suspended for a time. A quickie trip to The Netherlands was all that was needed as a lure. The Dutch hostesses were to be gracious and understanding. The International Olympic Committee was to pull a couple of weirdos. And a sojourn, of private nature, was to follow in Britain.

And it all happened. Yes, it did. And that's the short, short story from this corner, of the past four weeks.

But now it's back to that reality bit. So hi, there, all over again .. and here's how!

The spring junket started with an over - the - top - of-the-world flip with CP Air in a super DC-8. It took this magnificent flying machine just nine and one-half hours to make it from Vancouver to Amsterdam. And there were no stops along the route. (Which is different than it was the last time — hoo there, boy, boy, easy now — 29 long years ago.)

The North Sea arrived on schedule, six miles below, and shimmering in the early light of dawn. It did not aopear as foreboding as it once did. The pilot broke the nostalgia of what once had been an air-force career when he announced "We will be landing at Schiphol Airport in approximately one hour." We did.

Schiphol is the portal to Amsterdam, the aptly named gateway to Europe, and the sun was out for the occasion.

Great place, Amsterdam! But there will be more about that later, in the travel section, or, if more complete details are desired, a private audience may be arranged.

Because first things must, of necessity, come first. And the main item of business this day was the opening meeting of the International Olympic Committee. There was a devotion to duty, and a built-in national loyalty involved, for this was a foreign land and, after all, hadn't Vancouver-Garibaldi put in a bid for the 1976 Winter Olympics and Montreal for the summer event? Hadn't the B.C. delegates been assured of unswerving support from the International Winter Sports Federations? Wasn't a swift vote of acceptance expected for Vancouver? And weren't all the westerners just spoiling for a victory party?

Of course. But this was before Queen Juliana of the Netherlands declared the committee meetings officially open, and IOC president Avery Brundage was to breathe his usual fire and brimstone against the inroads of professionalism into his sacred domain.

There was nothing wrong with what Brundage said. He had said most of it before. And everyone got the message, but few really absorbed it.

Speaking of professionalism in Alpine skiing, his pet hate of the moment, he declared in part.

"This poison cancer must be eliminated. Alpine skiing has nothing to do with the Olympic Games."

He also spoke out against ice hockey, soccer and basketball. The committee and the assembled guests listened intently, applauded almost religiously, then later in the week looked the other way, just as they all had done for years before.

But they will study the problem, or problems, if they can localize them, which they can't. For which country can stand unblemished in the full light of a complete investigation? None is the answer. Which is what Canada said earlier about Olympic hockey, and quit international competition because of it.

Alpine skiing, is "only a mountain sport". International Ice Hockey Federation President Bunny Ahearne said here this winter. Maybe so. But in Europe, it is THE mountain sport, the glamour event of any season.

The Olympics without skiing! Perish the thought, or make it a world tourney. The same skiers will be the best ones, and will win.

But give Brundage his dues. He speaks his mind, and is either admired or detested for it.

He rules the IOC with a somewhat less than the iron hand earlier attributed to him. This was evident in light of the committee action on some of his requests. But he still has control, and is using it in the only way he knows, be threat and unuendo.

He has told the skiers to shape up or ship out. And the others like hockey players, too. But he must know the day of the golden amateur is long past. It would be ludicrous to think otherwise, after sitting in on some of the Amsterdam happenings.

Meanwhile, there was the decision of the moment. The key issue. The host cities for the 1976 Winter and Summer Games would be decided.

You all know the result. Montreal got the Summer Games. Denver the Winter Games.

Vancouver Garibaldi got nothing.

But some more thoughts on that decision tomorrow. This had been a long day.

$3.4 Million Price Tag Put on Troubled NHL Club

MONTREAL (CP)—Controversial baseball owner Charles O. Finley's bid for the troubled Oakland Seals franchise threatened to jam today's already crowded schedule at the National Hockey League annual meetings.

Finley, owner of Oakland Athletics of baseball's American League, was to make his pitch to NHL governors today to take over the Seals for an estimated $3,400,000.

Today's agenda is already crowded with the expansion draft in which two new clubs, Vancouver Canucks and Buffalo Sabres, will get 18 skaters and two goaltenders each for their $6,000,000 entry fees.

Each of the 12 existing clubs is allowed to protect two goalies and 15 other players against the intrusion by the newcomers.

Other unfinished business includes meetings between the American Hockey League, the Western Hockey League and the NHL to declare indemnification fees to be paid to the minor leagues for their displacement at Buffalo and Vancouver.

Still to be settled is the players-owner council agreement for this year. Alan Eagleson, the Toronto lawyer who is executive director of the NHL Players' Association, said Tuesday night the two sides "have reached preliminary agreement on several topics," but further discussion is necessary. He refused to elaborate.

Reds Confident of Oakland Future

Finley's unheralded appearance here was prompted by a California Superior Court decision Tuesday in which Judge Robert Schnacke ruled that the Seals return to their original ownership—a group headed by Barry van Gerbig.

Van Gerbig sought permission to regain the club from Trans-National Communications of New York in order to re-sell it to Finley.

The judge concurred, providing Finley could obtain permission to operate the franchise from the NHL governors.

Providence Reds of the AHL indicated confidence in Oakland's future when they renewed a one-year working agreement with the Seals Tuesday.

Tuesday's intra-league draft among the existing 12 clubs didn't stir much action. Fewer than 20 players were shuffled, with another four being drafted by Buffalo in the inter-league draft which followed immediately.

Stars Get Harris from Canadiens

Major move of the intra-league affair saw defenceman Ted Harris move from Montreal Canadiens to Minnesota North Stars. That indicated a further exchange was in the works between the two clubs following today's expansion work.

In addition to Harris, Montreal lost defenceman Paul Curtis to Los Angeles Kings. It brought to four the number of players the Kings have obtained in recent weeks from the Montreal organization's AHL farm club, the Voyageurs.

Other moves saw Toronto Maple Leafs draft Guy Trottier, a high-scoring centre with Buffalo Bisons, from New York Rangers. In return, the Leafs had to drop veteran right winger George Armstrong from its protected list, but there were no takers at the $30,000 draft price.

Each club could lose only one player in the intra-league draft. Goaltenders and first-year professionals were exempt.

Earlier, NHL president Clarence Campbell said the league governors had agreed to recognize the referees and linesmen's association and that the group headed by senior referee Bill Friday will be able now to bargain for officials at all levels of professional hockey.

Previous failure by the league to recognize the officials' organization led to a strike by a number of officials last fall.

One of the biggest surprises as the 12 existing National League teams prepared for the afternoon expansion draft was the dropping of centre Phil Goyette from the protected list by St. Louis Blues.

Each of the 12 clubs was allowed to protect two goaltenders and 15 forwards and defencemen against draft by Vancouver Canucks and Buffalo Sabres.

Hilaire Elected VITRA President

Other officers elected were John Biggs (vice-president), Pat Currier (secretary), Lawrence Fox (treasurer), Denny Rand (membership) and Derek Stratford (head of technical committee).

Elected to the technical committee (a body of men which ensures that the machinery prescribed for each class of racing car at Western Speedway is adhered to) were Rand, Tom Akey, Earl Pollard and Bob Collins.

Friendship Abandoned At Critical Cup Stage

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Soccer's World Cup, billed as the greatest-ever festival of professional sport and international friendship, kicks friendship out of the window today and gets down to the business of sorting the men from the boys.

This is the critical stage of the Jules Rimet Trophy preliminary group matches, the stage where the nice guys don't even come second.

Of the 16 teams that came here for the World Cup finals, 11 still are uncertain of what the future holds. Those 11 include defending champion England and, despite two wins in its first two matches, former champion Brazil.

Only two teams are definitely through to the quarter-final round of eight teams that opens Sunday, West Germany and Peru. They meet today at nearby Leon in Group IV of the preliminary contests, and the only thing at stake is top spot for their group. The top two teams from each of the four preliminary groups advance to the quarter-finals.

In the quarter-finals, the winner of Group I plays the second-place team of Group II at Mexico City; the top side from Group II takes on the second-place finisher from Group I at Toluca; the winner of Group III plays the second of Group IV at Guadalajara; and the winner of Group IV goes against the second from Group III at Leon.

In other games today, El Salvador faces the Soviet Union in Group I, Sweden goes against Uruguay in Group II, and Brazil plays Romania in Group III.

In the final games of group play Thursday, Belgium meets Mexico in Group I, Italy plays Israel in Group II, England goes against Czechoslovakia in Group III and Bulgaria is pitted against Morocco in Group IV.

CHANCE OF RAIN

The weather office in Mexico City said late Tuesday that today's soccer action would be played under cloudy skies, with a chance of rain for the El Salvador-Russia match here and the Sweden-Uruguay game at Puebla. Brazil and Romania clash at Guadalajara and West Germany and Peru at Leon.

Bulgaria and Morocco, with no chance of reaching the quarter-finals, meet Thursday for the sole purpose of salvaging a little dignity. If the Moroccans win, Bulgaria will go home from its second World Cup without a single point.

El Salvador has no chance of reaching the quarter-finals, but still can upset the applecart when it takes on the Soviet Union today.

A win for El Salvador would throw Group I open to Thursday's match between Belgium and Mexico. The more likely prospect of a mammoth win for the Soviets will pose problems of soccer politics, since it would make them probable Group I winners and entitled to play in Aztec Stadium here for the quarter-finals.

The Mexican hosts want to stay in the capital themselves instead of playing their quarter-final match in Toluca, where they would be relegated if they wound up second in Group I.

EXPECT ANYTHING

In Group II, Sweden has a chance, though a slim one, of upsetting the fortress defence of the Uruguayans. In Group III, the biggest riddle of the lot, Romania meets Brazil and anything can happen.

Brazilian camp gossip was that Coach Mario Zagalo, with four points under his belt, was tempted to put out his reserves rather than risk Pele and Tostao against the hard-tackling Romanian defence.

On the other hand, a win for Romania would mean a possibility that Brazil could be squeezed out of the quarter-final round.

KNEE RATTLES BUT RAIMEY DECLARED FIT

TORONTO (CP) — Halfback Dave Raimey of Toronto Argonauts, cut down late last season by serious ligament damage to his left knee, has been declared fit to play again by his doctors and the Canadian Football League team's training staff, although Raimey himself is complaining of pain.

Raimey, 29, joined Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the CFL in 1965 and came to Argonauts last year in the deal that sent quarterback Wally Gabler to Winnipeg.

Raimey exhibited his old running form during a voluntary practice last week.

"Sure the knee is OK on a practice run like that," Raimey said, "but it might be a lot different with guys waiting to hammer me.

"My knee still hurts. I can do about everything I used to, but it still hurts. It even rattles."

Change in Rules Opens Door for Jump Queen

North America's top woman high jumper, Debbie Brill of Haney, will have a chance to defend her title Friday in the B.C. high school track and field provincial championships at Centennial Stadium.

Due to a change in rules this season, Miss Brill qualifies for the provincial final, but under the same circumstances last year, could not have participated.

In the past, only the top two competitors in the qualifying meet of each zone have been eligible for the finals. Debbie finished a disappointing last in the Frazer Valley zone trials last month, after previously setting the North American record of six feet, one-quarter inch in Modesto, California.

The provincial final rules have been amended this season to allow competitors who have had a bad meet in the their district final to be eligible for one of two spots in an "open" zone if they have bettered the meet standard in previous sanctioned events.

WON BY SISTER

Debbie's Fraser Valley zone difficulties were in Abbotsford last month when she surprised everyone by failing to clear the bar at five feet, one inch. The jump competition was won by her younger sister, Connie Brill, already an outstanding performer in her own right. Connie cleared the bar at five feet, two and a half inches in the Fraser Valley meet, and will also compete here on the weekend.

Also affected by the rule change is Gail Turney, the Colonist Trophy winner for the top female performance in the Island meet.

Gail is eligible to enter the 200-metre sprint despite the fact that she was disqualified in the Cowichan High meet after reaching the tape first for running out of her lane.

24 IN EACH EVENT

As a result of the change in rules, 24 athletes from throughout the province are eligible for each event — two each from the Vancouver "A", Vancouver "B", Burnaby-New Westminster, Fraser Valley, Howe Sound, Okanagan, Vancouver Island, Kootenay, North B.C. Central, North B.C. West, Parochial and Private School and "open" zones.

Provincial meet director Tillman Briggs of Victoria explains that the B.C. event will follow the same format as last weekend's Vancouver Island competition.

There will be 11 finals along with the qualifying heats on Friday, with finals in the track events to be the 100 and 400 metre runs for both boys and girls and the 1500-metre steeplechase for boys.

Field events will be the girls' high jump, discus and javelin throw, and the boys' hammer throw, triple jump and shot put.

All other events will conclude Saturday.

Friday's program starts at 5:30 p.m., and Saturday's at 12 noon. Admission for the two-day meet is $1 for adults and 50c for students with passes good for both days. There will be no advance sale of tickets.

Laver Routs Tennis Rival

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Australian tennis ace Rod Laver, preparing to make his bid for a third-straight Wimbledon title, crushed India's Jaidip Mukerjea 6-4, 6-2 and Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., brushed aside Britain's Paul Huchins 6-2, 6-3 Tuesday in the Wills Open Championship.

The prestigious Wimbledon championships start June 22.

Hurlers Sparkle In Softball Duel

Bob Swanson, on the mound for Lake Cowichan, had a perfect game going until the first extra inning of the Victoria Major Men's Softball League game Tuesday at Central Park.

Then leading Bate Construction connected with their only hit of the game and went on to record a 1-0 victory over the fourth-place club.

Cowichan was also only able to collect one hit in the brilliant pitching duel between Swanson and Barry Jackson — a fifth inning single by Don O'Keefe.

Lyall Cornett stopped Swanson's streakof outs at 21 straight batters when he singled to lead off the top of the eighth inning. Cornett was then out on Tom Bourne's ground ball but Bourne advanced to second on a passed ball and scored on an outfield error.

Jackson had five strikeouts to Swanson's 11.

Bankruptcy Suit Filed by McLain

William Aikens, McLain's attorney, said the bankruptcy petition was filed in the United States bankruptcy court in Detroit after the pitcher was advised by Aikens there appeared to be no other course.

Aikens said McLain has virtually no assets and advised McLain that "bankruptcy was the only course which would enable him to straighten out his tangled finances."

McLain, who won 31 games for the Tigers in 1968, had invested in a number of businesses which Aikens said are of questionable value now.

Aikens said $275,000 of the unsecured claims against McLain are contested by the pitcher, who is scheduled to return to the Tigers on July 1 after a three-month suspension for alleged involvement in gambling.

Aikens said it appears unlikely that any of McLain's creditors will receive much.

Londoners Eye Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — A London investment company is negotiating with the Columbia Broadcasting System to purchase New York Yankees, the New York Daily News says.

The paper says Gerome D. Hoffman, president of International Investors Group Service Ltd., which sells mutual funds, confirmed the reports from his home in London.

"We are closely in touch with Michael Burke, president of the Yankees, and plan to pay top dollars for them," he was quoted as saying.

Former New York mayor Robert Wagner is the chairman of the board of the investment company and Hoffman, The Daily News reported, said Wagner would take an active part in running the baseball team if the deal is completed.

CBS purchased the Yankees in 1964 for $14,000,000 and for the last two years there have been rumors that the network would be willing to sell the American League team for the right price.

Chamber Asks Tax Incentives

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's tax system should give more incentives to business to develop Canada's potential fully and not concern itself unduly with redistribution of wealth, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce told a Commons committee Tuesday.

Frank S. Capon, chairman of the chamber's tax reform committee, said that if business is given a free hand, it will develop the real wealth of the country and natural forces in the economy will see that incomes are properly distributed.

The chamber's brief to the Commons finance committee, studying the government's white paper proposals for Income Tax Act revision, said maximum tax rates of 50 per cent should be a cornerstone of tax law.

It also said that only short-term capital gains should be treated as normal income for tax purposes, and any profits earned on investments held for more than three years should be taxed at lower rates.

SHOULD BE PASSED ON

The brief said credit for all corporation taxes should be passed on to corporation shareholders as an offset against their personal income taxes. The chamber would abolish the white paper's distinction between closely-held and widely-owned corporations.

The government proposes to allow shareholders in widely-held companies credit for only half the corporation taxes paid.

Mr. Capon defended the full credit to shareholders for taxes paid by their corporations as a means of eliminating double taxation—taxes on both the profits earned by the company and the dividends paid to shareholders out of after-tax profits.

He said ultimately he hopes that corporations would pay no taxes, but admitted such a possibility is "a long way down the road."

He also said the tax system is not the best way to redistribute incomes, by taxing the rich and giving to the poor. The more then country relied on the tax system to do so, the deeper it would get into trouble.

In his view, Canada already had achieved a fair distribution of incomes. He suggested the poverty group in Canada is about one per cent of the total population.

FIGURE DISPUTED

John Burton (NDP—Regina East) and John Roberts (L—Simcoe) recalled the Economic Council of Canada estimates that 25 per cent of the whole population, 20 per cent of urban families and 40 per cent of rural families are at or below the poverty line.

"This so-called poverty problem has developed because we have not allowed the system to generate the maximum amount of wealth," Mr. Capon said. If business was given a free hand, it would develop all the wealth needed.

But to have the tax system take some of that wealth and hand it "to these people" destroys incentives, Mr. Capon added. Business could supply employment to most people, and it was a responsibility of government to provide for their leisure time and a better life.

After 25 Years, United Nations a Paradox

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — It was built on ideals, but has bred cynicism.

It speaks of the hopes of man, but it sees starvation, war and racial hatred.

It's dominated by the big powers, but offers a voice to the newest emerging country.

It has praised men who venture into space, but it can't clear the Suez canal.

It has heard noble thoughts, and has been warned it's drowning in a sea of words.

It is the United Nations, a quarter-century old this year.

Twenty-five years ago the representatives of 50 countries met in San Francisco as the Second World War was drawing to a close. Their objective was to work out the final details of a world organization dedicated to peace and prosperity for mankind.

After three months the representatives agreed on a charter and on Oct. 24, 1945, that charter came into effect.

Resolves Noble

The founding nations, and those that followed them, resolved to combine to accomplish the aims of an end to the "scourge of war" and to promote fundamental human rights, social progress, better standards of life and to "practise tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbors."

The ringing declarations of the charter were heady stuff for a world still staggering from the conflict that members of the predecessor organization, the League of Nations, had been unable to prevent.

The idea of a new organization had grown from a meeting of Allied representatives in London in 1941 through the Atlantic Charter of the same year and meetings in Washington—the Declaration of the UN by 26 Allies in 1942—Tehran and Dumbarton Oaks.

The founding fathers may have had some reservations. But for most of the world the new organization offered hope for the future.

Today, in the silver anniversary year, the "scourge of war" remains. Billions are being spent on armaments and only a fraction of that on aid to the needy. Few countries—Canada included—have met the UN goal of one per cent of the gross national product dedicated to helping the less fortunate.

Work for Control

The first order of business of the first General Assembly—partly on the initiative of Canada—in January, 1946, was control of nuclear armaments. Today the world still is struggling with the problem as nuclear stockpiles get larger and deadlier.

The UN was more or less successful with the first political problem before it, although the Soviet Union cast the first of more than 100 vetoes in the Security Council. That was when Iran demanded withdrawal of Soviet troops from her territory. The Russians cast their veto but withdrew their troops.

Since then its political record is a matter of debate. It has been learned that a country can defy the UN and live. It has been learned that the UN can be invaluable in a dispute, but settlements probably must be achieved elsewhere. In the words of Secretary-General U Thant, the UN still falls short of being a world parliament.

But, as this anniversary year moves on, many are expected to say that the existence of the UN probably prevented a third world war.

They will say that it is a place to meet, talk and negotiate; that words are better than bullets.

And they will point to the quiet progress of the UN and its associated agencies in the humanitarian field, in health, in law, in aid, in education, in labor, in conservation, in trade.

Problems Come Out

Problems are not often solved—some of the world's problems, population for instance, appear virtually to defy solution. But they are brought out for all to see and the greatest minds on earth can be directed at them.

The "Green Revolution," under which countries such as India are approaching self-sufficiency in domestically produced staples, was helped by the UN.

The late secretary-general Dag Hammarskjold is known to have felt that the Suez crisis of 1956 could have developed into a cataclysmic conflict had it not been for the UN.

If that is to be believed, perhaps the Suez period might be called the UN's finest hour. The General Assembly was called to deal with the invasion of Egypt by Israel, France and Britain because the veto-bound Security Council was unable to act. The General Assembly acted swiftly on the recommendation of Canada's Lester Pearson to send a UN force to the area.

For 10 years that force, created over the objections of the Soviet Union, kept what passed for peace in the area.

Its withdrawal by Thant still is a matter of controversy, and the whole question of peacekeeping brought the UN into crisis in the 1960s. Experts, including Canada, are still meeting to find an acceptable formula for UN peace forces.

Mid-East in Crisis

The Middle East was in crisis when the UN was born—Israel often is called a child of the UN—and it is today.

But every world crisis has touched this organization, and the UN has been directly involved in some of them. Some are fading into history: the Greek government's battle with communism; the birth pains of Indonesia, Nigeria, Tunis, Morocco and others; American landings in Lebanon, among others.

Others flare up periodically: the India-Pakistan dispute over Kashmir—Canadians still are members of the long-established observer force there—for instance.

Still others remain fresh: the Soviet invasions of Hungary and Czechoslovakia; the bitter days of The Congo peace force—more Canadians there—and the recriminations on UN force debt repayment afterward; the Korean War; the Cyprus dispute—Canadians there still.

The Vietnam war, which never came before the UN formally, has permeated the atmosphere here for years.

Meanwhile, the UN—a follower not a leader—has changed with the world. In the early days it virtually was the preserve of the West, with the Soviet Union forced to use the veto frequently to preserve its interests.

But as more countries entered the UN—many of them former colonies in Africa and Asia, and as governments changed, the balance swung away from the West. Thirty countries gained independence in Africa between 1960 and 1967 alone.

Could Swing Vote

The under-developed countries, those from Africa and Asia and Latin America, could join to swing any vote. So now the "Third World" holds the balance of power. And voting now is not always East vs. West. Sometimes it is North (the developed) vs. South (the undeveloped).

And there was another radical change. The arrival of the former colonies brought greater awareness of human rights to the UN. The anti-colonialist feeling reached a peak in 1960, when 43 Afro-Asian countries sponsored the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries.

The racial problems of southern Africa reached the UN first in 1947 when the UN tried to get the former German colony of South-West Africa back from South Africa, which held it under a League of Nations mandate. Now South African apartheid, Rhodesian independence and Portuguese colonies in Africa take much of the UN's time.

Technical assistance for the under-developed started early in UN history, but on a small scale. It grew with little direction.

Then came the "First Development Decade," now ending. It was designed to bring disjointed efforts together. For the first time the idea that the under-developed should get a portion of the gross national product of the developed was put forward.

Must Be Success

But the First Decade was at best only a partial success—many receiving countries said it was a failure. Now, with Canada deeply involved, preparations are being made for a Second Decade. Time, authorities say, is running out to help the needy. The Second Decade must be a success.

Meanwhile, as the UN meetings moved from London, to Lake Success, N.Y., and then to the modern buildings in Manhattan, there has been drama and some comedy.

For instance there was the unbelievable spectacle in 1960 of Nikita Khrushchev banging his shoe on his General Assembly desk to interrupt a speaker.

Much else has happened, including:

—Khrushchev's bitter debates with Hammarskjold, a man who believed he had the right to take independent action. The Soviet leader proposed his famous troika (three men) formula to run the UN instead of a single secretary-general.

—The drama of the Cuba missile crisis in 1962 when the then U.S. ambassador Adlai Stevenson leaned over his desk to tell an uncomfortable Soviet Ambassador Valerian A. Zorin that he would wait until "hell freezes over" for an answer on whether the Soviets were indeed putting missiles on Cuba.

—The bitter debates over the Soviet invasions of Hungary and Czechoslovakia, when the Security Council argued far into the night.

—The day in February, 1962, when blacks sympathetic to assassinated Patrice Lumumba, former Congo leader, charged into the Security Council chamber and a scuffle with members ensued.

What of the future of the UN? At the last session of the General Assembly the 126 members took an unprecedented look at themselves and were not happy at what they saw.

And there is the feeling that the UN can never be a true world organization until there is representation for the 800,000,000 people on the Chinese mainland. Observers say it will be years before the Communist Chinese are admitted here, however.

Regulation No. 20/67).

A copy of the proposed amending By-laws may be inspected at the offices of the Building Inspector of the Capital Regional District at 696 Goldstream Avenue between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 12:00 noon, and at the Planning Department of the Capital Regional District, Room 209, Burnes House, Bastion Square, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. on any weekday, except Saturday or statutory holidays.

UNDERGROUND LINES for telephone services in Oak Bay have been stretched from the offices on Foul Bay Road to Oak Bay Ave., east to Newport to Currie Road. A B.C. Tel workman (above) guides one of the cables through a conduit. The cost of the conduit and cable placed underground (six reels of cable, each 1,500 feet long and containing 2,400 pairs of wires) is estimated at $250,000. These new cables, installed last week, will be used for the second phase of transferring over 5,000 customers in south Oak Bay from the Victoria exchange to the new Foul Bay Road office.

Negro Police to Aid Blacks

By ROBERT C. MAYNARD

ATLANTIC CITY (WP) — Declaring they are "no longer co-conspirators with white authority," members of the largest and oldest organization of black policemen in the United States decided here they will arrest any police officer they see abusing black citizens.

In a series of strongly-worded resolutions the National Council of Police Societies also called on President Nixon to lay down strict guidelines for police use of firearms, condemned their supervisors for laxity in the enforcement of narcotics laws in the black community and committed themselves to "change the racist behavior of white policemen since we cannot change their attitudes."

The society is the national association of a score of Negro police societies, many of whose members are veteran policemen in such cities as New York, Chicago, Newark, Atlanta, and Oakland, Calif.

Society meetings in the past have been largely social gatherings with a sprinkling of duscussion of such questions as how to encourage more Negroes to join police forces. But the society, according to one officer, is "running to catch up" with the increasing militant stand of the black community.

"The black policeman knows the same heel on his brother's neck leaves a heel-print on his own neck," said Howard Sheffey, chairman of the board and a New York City police sergeant.

"We will no longer be co-conspirators with white authority," Sheffey said, reading one of the society's resolutions. "We have resolved to rededicate ourselves to involvement in black community problems.

Giving a practical example of what the new stance means, Sheffey, assigned to Harlem, said, "If I see a white policeman beating a prisoner, I'll place him under arrest for assault."

Disturbed by the recent shootings at Jackson (Miss.) State College, in Augusta, Georgia and at Kent State University, the council called on the president and the department of justice to lay down a "sane firearms policy."

The organization placed the responsibility for protecting black citizens from excessive use of firearms on the black police officer himself. It advised black policemen witnessing excessive use of firearms to "take proper police action," meaning to arrest the offending officer.

The society, which represents 10,000 black policemen and policewomen, urged the adoption of the guidelines for the use of firearms recommended in 1966 by the task force on the police of the U.S. Crime Commission.

The guidelines recommend that deadly force should not be used against any suspect unless the arresting officer's safety or the safety of bystanders is endangered.

The crime commission recommended that deadly force should never be used "on mere suspicion" or against a felony suspect "when lesser force could be used."

Buyers' Strikes Lauded As Effective Power Force

SASKATOON (CP)—The same techniques used by unions in industrial relations can be applied by consumers, union leader William Dodge said Tuesday.

Mr. Dodge, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, told delegates to the Consumers' Association of Canada annual meeting that consumers are learning that boycotts, "or buyers' strikes", are effective means of exerting power.

He said consumers have not paid attention to their responsibilities because they have been brainwashed by advertising campaigns.

"We'll see you on the picket lines," he told about 200 association delegates and guests.

Mr. Dodge was one of four panelists responding to an address by freelance writer and broadcaster John Fisher who said consumers must organize and use their power.

Mr. Fisher, author of The Plot to Make You Buy, said the consumer organization will have to tackle broader aspects than just advertising, packaging, marketing and sales promotion gimmicks.

"Instead of tinkering with the so-called free-market economy, and telling people how to beat the system, we should be educating Canadians and Americans to the basic folly of our wasteful way of life."

Present-day consumerism in North America is built around relative abundance, he said. "But . . . our children's world will be one of scarcity—either self-imposed or externally-imposed."

Not all panelists agreed.

Jean de Grandpre, executive vice-president of Bell Canada in Montreal, said he believes in co-operation and a more rational approach to the problems of consumers.

Ernest Steele, president of the Grocery Products Manufacturers' of Canada, said that as the system for supplying wants and needs in society become more complex, there is greater need for consumer participation and concern.

Organization and power are needed, he said, but it must be responsible.

"The classic concept of a free-market economy is baloney."

All members of society should consider the exploitation of men, resources and labor under the present marketing system and the amount of waste created.

Eye Examination at 40 Could Prevent Blindness

By DON VIPOND

Everyone should have at least one medical eye examination around age 40 to guard against glaucoma, a prominent ophthalmologist said in Victoria Tuesday.

The disease is insidious because those infected don't notice any problems for the first seven or eight years, said Dr. Michel Mathieu of Montreal. By that time glaucoma is well advanced.

It is associated with raised pressure in the eye and if untreated will produce blindness. Detected early, it can be controlled and its earliest signs can be spotted in a routine examination by an ophthalmologist.

SEVERAL KINDS

Glaucoma exists in several forms but the most common attacks two out of 100 adults over 40.

Mathieu is president of the Canadian Ophthalmological Society which is holding its 33rd annual meeting at The Empress this week. Over 200 doctors, eye specialists from across Canada, are attending.

Internationally known for his work in corneal disease, he has conducted an average of two corneal transplants a week for the last 20 years.

THE WINDOW

The cornea is the window of the eye, the clear area on the outer coat which allows light to be transmitted through it.

Corneal transplants came long before transplantations of organs of the body. Mathieu estimates an overall success rate of about 50 per cent. With some forms of eye ailments, success reaches 90 per cent.

Among the most recent major advances in eye treatment he lists fluoresceine angiography, a diagnostic technique in which a dye injected into the bloodstream rapidly covers vessels on the back of the eye.

This allows doctors to see much tinier lesions and spot other problems more readily. One form of treating lesions is to burn them away using an intense beam of light.

SMALL AREA

How do eye surgeons work in such a restricted area as the eye? Mathieu says operating using a microscope enables them to do much more detailed work, use finer sutures and instruments.

"If you bring the old type of instruments under the microscope they look as big as a pick and shovel."

The supply of corneas for transplants is still well below the need and more must be done to inform the public of the problem, said Mathieu. The Canadian National Institute fo the Blind has an education program aimed in this direction.

In the past when a cornea donation was available, the operation had to proceed rapidly. But methods of preserving corneas in liquid nitrogen for months have been developed.

NOT POSSIBLE

Mathieu said entire eye transplants are impossible and as far as medical science can see at the moment will remain so. The reason is the optic nerve at the back of the eye would have to be cut and it won't regenerate. Some types of nerves will but not those that are part of the brain. For that reason brain transplants are out, too.

The annual meeting this week will see 44 papers presented and quite a few others had to be put off for lack of time, said Mathieu. This contrasts with the total of 19 papers presented at the annual meeting 10 years ago.

DUNCAN — City council has asked for the co-operation of the junior and senior Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' Association in a proposed clean-up, paint-up campaign in Duncan.

Building Pace Down Sharply

Construction activity almost collapsed in Central Saanich in May.

Permits worth only $95,764 were issued, compared with $983,660 in May, 1969.

For the first five months, permits worth $860,403 were issued compared with $1,427,560 in the same period last year.

Sidney building permits were down for May and the first five months.

In May, the value was $194,370 compared with $671,876 in the same month last year.

Canada Joins Mutton Ban

CANBERRA (Reuters) — Canada has placed a ban on Australian mutton imports, Primary Industry Minister Douglas Anothony told Parliament today.

Anthony said the Canadian ban and an earlier ban placed by United States' authorities on Australian mutton would affect about 40 per cent of Australia's mutton exports.

Canada imposed the ban for the same reason as the American authorities—the presence of some organisms in the mutton.

The organisms were not considered harmful to humans, the minister said.

"The Canadian minister for agriculture has informed us that no further shipments of mutton from Australia will be permitted entry until inspection standards have been brought up to U. S. standards," Anthony said.

2-Year Sentence for Theft Of Ball-Point Pen and $9

Edwin Carl Usher, 54, of a downtown hotel, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary Tuesday by Judge William Ostler in provincial court.

He was seen leaving the building by cleaning women, and it was subsequently determined that $4 in American coin, approximately $5 Canadian money and a ball point pen were missing.

Usher, who claimed he was in a beer parlor at the time of the offence, was identified by the cleaning women and picked from a police line-up.

He had been released from prison March 13 after serving time on a previous conviction in Vancouver, and said he was in Victoria looking for work.

Jordan War Intensifies

Rebels Ignore Truce

Times News Services

The Arab guerrilla revolt against the Jordanian government continued to rage in the streets of Amman, the capital, today despite an announced ceasefire pact reached between King Hussein and rebel leader Yasir Arafat, head of the commandos' supreme council.

A dispatch received in Washington just before noon said all telephone and electric power service has failed in the Jordanian capital, and gunfire in the streets has made it impossible to remain outside.

Guerrilla sources in Lebanon said the government troops, some of which had been pulled back from the Jordan River-Israel front to deal with the insurrection, were shelling all areas inhabited by Palestinian Arabs, including refugee camps.

The Arab revolt, which exploded into open warfare Tuesday, is being led by guerrilla extremists who seek a more aggressive stance by Jordan against Israel.

A spokesman of Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla organization in the Middle East, said in Beirut that there had been scores of casualties, including women and children, in the bombardment of one camp that is the site of the headquarters of the radical popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Observers in Lebanon said it seemed that the situation was deteriorating into an all-out fight between extremist elements on both sides, with the moderates, represented by the king and Arafat,

44 MINERS TRAPPED IN FLOODED SHAFT

PRAGUE (AP) — Forty-four Czechoslovak miners are trapped in a flooded coal mine near Hodonin in southern Moravia, Prague radio said today.

The broadcast said rescue teams had arrived from as far away as northern Moravia in attempts to save the men, trapped Tuesday night when downpour rains flooded an open-pit mine so suddenly the men were unable to leave.

Towboat Men Vote on Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Some 400 west coast towboats and their 1,150 officers and engineers could be back at work early next week if a contract settlement endorsed by union negotiators is accepted by the membership.

Result of voting by the members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild on the offer, reported to be 26 per cent over 2½ years, is expected by Friday night.

Federal mediator William Kelly said the settlement will bring about "major improvements in the working conditions of the towboat men."

"It will drastically reduce the hours of duty required of the masters and officers which have been bitterly complained about."

Provision of a minimum six-man crew on all large, continuously-operating tugs, which at one time was a main union demand, is believed not included in the offer.

DISPUTE HEARD

Meanwhile, a conciliation board is hearing a dispute between the British Columbia Towboat Owners Association, which represents 53 companies, and the Seafarers International Union which has 250 members working on the tugs.

The association said Tuesday, however, that the SIU "generally goes along with what the guild gets." Current guild pay rates range from $583 a month for the mate of a small tug to $980 for the captain of a large one.

Increases for these categories will range from $170 a month to $268. New regulations, covering most of the bitterly-fought safety issues including design and construction of the boats, accommodation and work practices, are to be announced in the Commons today by Transport Minister Don Jamieson.

In another development, an appeal was launched Tuesday against the six-month jail sentence imposed on chief guild negotiator Capt. Arnie Davis last Thursday for contempt of a B.C. supreme court injunction banning picketing.

The appeal claimed that the contempt order didn't state whether proceedings were criminal or civil, didn't disclose whether any rules applied to the proceedings and that it was made ex parte, in the absence of Capt. Davis.

20,000 JOBLESS

The strike which started May 3 has thrown out of work 20,000 men in the forest industry, either through layoffs because of lack of raw materials usually handled by tugs, or because they refuse to cross towboat picket lines.

It followed nine months of negotiations and rejection of a 21 per cent pay increase over three years. A secret DOT report leaked to the press by the guild stated 80 per cent of

Only Food Vouchers Granted Jobless

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi has decided to grant limited assistance — food vouchers — to families made destitute by labor disputes.

The announcement that directives had been sent to welfare offices on Tuesday morning was made by deputy minister E. R. Rickinson Tuesday afternoon to leaders of more than 200 jobless men from Cowichan Valley protesting in front of the Legislative Buildings.

To qualify for the vouchers, idled workers will have to prove they are destitute and that they are ineligible for unemployment insurance, register with the federal manpower department to show there is no job for them and fill in the usual application forms for social assistance.

Rickinson stressed that only food vouchers will be issued, not cash, as is the case for most welfare recipients.

Rickinson also informed demonstration leaders, which included Robert Strachan, MLA for Cowichan-Malahat, that Gaglardi, who was out of town, would meet them Thursday at 1:30 p.m.

One of the organizers of the demonstration, Fermie Viala, vice-president of the Duncan local of the International Woodworkers of America, said they would press for full welfare assistance for workers laid-off or locked out in labor disputes.

SECOND-CLASS CITIZENS

"We want to be eligible for welfare as any other destitute person. To give us vouchers for food only, while others get welfare cheques, makes us second-class citizens," Viala said.

Viala said that he and leaders of the Carpenters Union and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada would also try to meet Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Thursday afternoon to protest B.C.'s labor laws. Peterson was out of town Tuesday afternoon.

When Viala and Strachan informed the demonstrators of the food voucher announcement, several voiced unhappiness that the protest had accomplished so little.

BETTER DO SOMETHING

"There better be a lot of cheques ready tomorrow," yelled another.

"Bring the parasites (Gaglardi and Peterson) out," demanded another.

Under the urging of the leaders, the demonstrators, still muttering, gradually broke up.

The demonstration began as a motorcade from Duncan. It stopped briefly at the Ocean Cement plant at Bamberton where Strachan met company officials and failed to persuade them to end their ban on cement sales throughout the province.

CARRY PLACARDS

PROTEST JAILING

Strachan told the demonstrators they were there to protest the jailing of Capt. Arnie Davis, chief negotiator for the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, to urge humane labor laws to get the correct interpretation and use of welfare legislation and "to focus attention on the current social crisis" created by the labor disputes.

OIL LEAK FEARED WATERFOWL THREAT

EDMONTON (CP) — Oil from a broken pipeline at Fort McMurray could cause "considerable damage" to waterfowl 150 miles downstream on the Athabasca River, an Alberta government official said today.

Particles of oil from the pipeline break were believed by officials to be entering the Athabasca Delta where the river flows into Lake Athabasca.

"It doesn't look good," said Al Boggs, district officer with the fish and wildlife division at Fort McMurray, 230 miles north of Edmonton. "Considerable damage could be done to waterfowl."

250 Young People Take Over Hotel

SASKATOON (CP) — Between 250 and 300 young people took control of the downtown Bessborough Hotel Tuesday night and served themselves beer after management closed off the taps.

It was the second demonstration at the publicly-owned Canadian National Railways hotel this week.

The demonstrators, protesting the hotel's new rulings on appearance and dress, stood on tables, taunted police and tore windows from their hinges in the barroom.

City police and RCMP were on hand but made no arrests. A police spokesman said no police action could be taken unless requested by the management.

Shortly after the young people marched on the hotel—about 8 p.m. CST — George McCabe, hotel manager, ordered the bar shut down. But the crowd, which overflowed into the lobby, helped themselves to pickled eggs, opened the beer taps and formed a beer line.

At one point a loud speaker was brought in and was used to shout insults at the hotel management.

The demonstrators left at 11:30 p.m. promising to return for a "sleep-in" tonight.

Monday night about 200 young people invaded the beverage room and the liquor lounge after some persons were ejected for not conforming to dress regulations.

N.Y. Police Station Bombed

NEW YORK (AP) — Seventeen minutes after an anonymous caller telephoned a bomb threat, a powerful dynamite blast ripped through the second floor of police headquarters Tuesday night.

Eight persons were injured, none seriously.

LITTLE ROOM FOR COMPROMISE IN POST TALKS

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Treasury board and postal union negotiators postponed today's scheduled bargaining meeting, saying they need more time to prepare their positions.

Spokesmen for both sides said the delay was mutually agreed on and they will meet at 10:30 a.m. Thursday rather than today. Meantime, both sides will caucus separately to prepare future bargaining strategy.

During Tuesday, when both parties met face-to-face for 2½ hours, it became clear that the government's program of wage restraint leaves treasury board and the unions with little room for a compromise.

Meanwhile, United Press International reported that the country's two major labor organizations have offered to financially support a general strike of postal workers in an attempt to force the government down from its recently-implemented 6 per cent wage guideline.

In Toronto, 2,669 postal employees were back on the job after striking the post office Tuesday. Workers in Windsor, Ont., joined the return to work after staying home Tuesday for the 11th day after a one-day return on Monday.

PQ Member Takes Seat

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — The only Parti Quebecois candidate elected during the April 29 Quebec general election who took the required oath of allegiance to the Queen today took his seat on the opposition side of the National Assembly chamber.

Charles Tremblay promptly asked Premier Robert Bourassa how long his fellow Parti Quebecois members would have to remain outside the assembly and was told that a committee had been formed to hear the party's case once debate on the inaugural address has ended.

NORTH VIETS CAPTURE KEY TOWN

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — North Vietnamese troops have occupied the last major government-controlled town in southern Laos, informed sources said today.

They said the North Vietnamese captured the key town of Saravane Tuesday.

Showdown Vote Set Over War

Times News Services

The U.S. Senate today is preparing for a showdown vote Thursday on a Nixon-backed resolution which would allow President Nixon, without approval of the U.S. Congress, to send troops back into Cambodia after the July 1 deadline.

A close vote is expected and the administration believes it has the support to pass the resolution.

Sens. Mike Mansfield (D — Mont.), Frank Church (D — Idaho) and John Sherman Cooper (R — Ky.) called the administration-backed move the equivalent of a new "Gulf of Tonkin Resolution" which would allow the president to take any war action in Cambodia he wishes and would nullify the Cooper-Church amendment. The latter denies funds for further U.S. operations in Cambodia after July 1 without the prior consent of Congress.

On the war front, Cambodian troops pushed back North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops from around the provincial capital of Siem Reap, 185 miles northwest of Phnom Penh.

'MUST LOWER EXCESSIVE COSTS'

Basford Vows Drug Action

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford hinted today at direct federal intervention to bring down retail drug prices if co-operative efforts with the provinces fail to work.

"However unpleasant it might be to intervene more directly in the market place, it may prove necessary, in order to meet the paramount objective—lowering of excessive costs," he said.

"Needless to say, it would be preferable to cure the ills of the market place through voluntary co-operation, imaginative streamlining of techniques and broad competitive forces."

Mr. Basford made the statements at a closed meeting of federal and provincial government officials. A text of his statement was distributed outside the meeting.

"I am convinced that the level of prices for prescription drugs is too high," he said in reporting on a just-concluded survey in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

BASFORD
. . . down or else

Mr. Basford said the survey of 19 commonly prescribed drugs at 10 drugstores in each city shows "that more competitive practices could lead to significant reductions in prices."

He said the consumer affairs department will maintain close scrutiny over price movements through industry price lists as well as through existing statistical indexes.

Mr. Basford told the meeting that recent steps to weaken patent protection enjoyed by some drugs had resulted in remarkable results in lowering drug prices.

The federal patent commissioner had issued licences to im-

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Gordon Gibson, of Vancouver, executive assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau, is at the head of a parade of several executive assistants, special assistants and other staff people planning to leave the government service this summer.

The departures — 10 in number according to latest count — have given rise to rumors that there is some unhappiness behind the scenes in the executive suites on Parliament Hill.

The rumors reached the floor of the Commons Tuesday when G. W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) asked: "Would the prime minister make a statement in connection with the alleged resignation of seven ministerial assistants because of the autocratic rule of the prime minister?"

Opposition members banged their desks in applause. Last year Opposition Leader Robert Stanfileld's office who decided they had served long enough on Parliament Hill and resigned to take other posts in private business.

At the time the Liberals asked questions in the House about "trouble" in the opposition leaders' office.

In addition to Gibson, who has told many people in Ottawa that he plans to leave the prime minister's staff this summer, James Wightman of the prime minister's press office, is understood to be planning a move.

Both Gibson and Wightman have been with the prime minister since he was elected to that office. Wightman served as a press officer with former prime minister L. B. Pearson.

Among the executive assistants and special assistants planning to leave this summer are Robert McDowell, special assistant to services and supply minister James Richardson of Winnipeg; Tom Brett, executive assistant to government leader in the Senate, Paul Martin; Richard Hayes, executive assistant to Justice Minister John Turner; Blair William and Michael Barry, assistants to Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson; and Robert Wong, special assistant to Health and Welfare Minister John Munro.

One such drug, diazepam, a tranquillizer, now was being quoted at a suggested retail price 30 per cent below a competitor.

He said he is told that for another tranquillizer, chlordiazepoxide, a similar sharp reduction took place. One drug industry estimate was that hospitals and governments would be saved $950,000 a year as a result of price competition in this drug alone.

Mr. Basford said the federal government's role in dealing with the high cost of retail drug distribution is mainly that of a catalyst.

But, if any part of the federal program "fails to measure up to expectations, either through inadequacy or lack of support, other steps must be contemplated."

He followed this remark with a reference to direct intervention. He said the federal combines investigation branch has a role in maintaining competitive practices. The consumers branch would facilitate competition by informing consumers.

"It is our intention to foster the greatest possible degree of competition consistent with the highest standards of health care and physical safety."

THE WEATHER

There will be sunshine for Victorians Thursday. The weather office at Victoria International Airport also forecast southwesterly winds at 15 m.p.h. or less.

Temperatures are expected to reach an overnight low of 45 with a high of 62 Thursday. But they may reach 65 or 70 in areas protected from the wind.

Driver Jailed, Cabbie Hurt in Flaming Crash

Bruce Lief Erikson, 26, of Vancouver, was sentenced to 14 days in prison and had his licence suspended for a year in provincial court this morning.

Erikson was charged with dangerous driving Tuesday night following a flaming two-car collision at the intersection of Quadra and Fort at 11:30 p.m.

Eriskon pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler on the Criminal Code charge. He admitted to police after the crash that he ran a red light while travelling up Fort Street at about 45 miles per hour.

HIT HYDRANT

His car was in collision with a taxi, and after impact the vehicles spun across the intersection, bending a steel traffic signal post and shearing off a fire hydrant.

The taxi burst into flames immediately after the collision, but quick work by passers-by got victims out of the wreckage and around a corner, away from the flames.

Eleanor Kairez, 19, of 3335 Midland, Oak Bay, a passenger in Baker's taxi, was treated for leg cuts and released from Royal Jubilee Hospital.

An unidentified passenger in Erikson's car was unhurt.

'BEAT LIGHT'

Police reported Erikson told them he knew the light was red but that he though "he could beat the light and the other car."

"That sort of horsing around can lead to a person's death," Ostler told Erikson before passing sentence.

City police were assisted by two fire trucks, two ambulances and city waterworks and engineers staff.

In another long-standing dispute, the Construction Labor Relations Association said Tuesday night it will appeal a court decision which denied it an injunction killing a contract signed by a member firm with the plumbers union.

Atlas Installations Ltd. signed a contract after the CLRA locked out the plumbers and eight other construction unions in April, while a 10th union struck. More than 10,000 workers have been idled.

NO BARGAINING

The company said it signed on its own because there was no "true collective bargaining" between the 630-member CLRA and the unions and Atlas was threatened with bankruptcy.

Two hotels whose waitresses and bartenders struck Monday continued to operate with non-union labor crossing picket lines. Forty-five other hotels in the Lower Mainland and Fraser Valley, excluding Vancouver, have served lockout notice effective 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

Festival Reports $500 Profit

The Greater Victoria Music Festival ended up $500 in the black after spending $9,916 in 1970, the treasurer reported to the annual meeting of the festival association Tuesday.

And it will begin its new year with $1,249 in the bank compared with just $777 a year ago.

It had been a good year but "we must not relax our efforts or be over optimistic" warned Walter Kitley in his presidential report.

He told the well-attended meeting at the Conservatory of Music that cost of running the festival would inevitably rise in 1971 with the necessity of bringing in more adjudicators to cope with big classes and rental of additional halls.

ELECTED

The following executive and board of directors was elected for the ensuing year.

Mrs. William Ellis, honorary president; Walter Kitley, president; Mrs. V. Berringer, past president; Philip Kitley, vice-president; Mrs. Marjorie Kitley, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary Saich, recording secretary; Dr. J. F. K. English, treasurer; Mrs. Ada English, festival secretary.

By IAN MacDOWALL

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) — In the short run at least, only Israel stands to benefit by the bitter fighting of the last few days between Jordanian troops and Palestine guerrillas in and around Amman.

Experience of past crises between King Hussein and commandos shows that the diversion of guerrilla energies to fighting other Arabs and the pressure of urgent political problems on the fedayeen leadership throws operations against Israel out of gear for some time afterward.

What the long-term effect on the fight with Israel will be depends on the new balance of power in Jordan resulting from the clashes of the last four days.

Observers here said that, while the ceasefire agreement reached between the king and commandos early today was still unenforced, it is impossible to gauge the new pattern of relations between the two sides.

CUTS KING'S POWER

But two factors indicate that the king's authority will be seriously impaired as a result of the week's events.

First is the fact that in a series of pitched battles, the commandos denied his troops control of the city centre and, some reports said, captured his interior ministry while successfully resisting army attempts to seize their strongholds in the refugee camps.

The second factor is the role —as yet unclear but definitely important—of Iraq in achieving the ceasefire agreement announced after a meeting early today between the king and guerrilla chief Yasir Arafat.

Iraq was represented by a powerful group of ministers and army commanders at the talks in the royal palace. And their arguments in favor of a peaceful solution were backed up by the presence of 12,000 Iraqi troops serving in Jordan as part of the eastern front.

HOLD BALANCE OF POWER

These troops, who hold a balance of power in the country, are reported to have clashed with Jordanian units Monday night in defence of the guerrillas.

Given the radical character of the Iraqi government and its outspoken militancy against Israel, observers here believe that if Baghdad is acting as peacemaker it would be on terms which would commit post-crisis Jordan to a tougher line against Israel.

The commandos have charged that reactionary Jordanian elements—and they have listed them as including close political and military advisers of the king, including members of the royal family —instigated the clashes in order to suppress the resistance movement with a view to obtaining a peace settlement with Israel.

unable to enforce obedience o the ceasefire.

The Popular Front said, meanwhile, it would not be responsible for the lives of 32 foreigners, held hostage in an Amman hotel, if there were further attacks on refugee camps.

A spokesman for the front said earlier that the hostages were in no danger.

Amman radio said that joint Palestinian-Jordanian patrols were moving therough the streets of Amman to enforce the case-fire. But there was no confirmation of this from the commando side.

A Popular Front spokesman said in Beurut that the organization rejects compromise solutions and unclear promises and demands implementation of a four-point program that includes dismissal from the positions of authority of all anti-commando elements and release of all commandoes from detention.

IGNORE CEASEFIRE

All day Amman radio broadcast an announcement of a ceasefire agreement concluded by King Hussein and Arafat in early-morning talks at the royal palace attended by a powerful Iraqi delegation.

But the ceasefire call was ignored, as were repeated radio appeals for calm and a return to normal.

An American staff memoer of the U.S. embassy in Amman has been killed in the fighting, the state department reported today.

A spokesman said that reports from witnesses indicate that "he was caught in a crossfire in his home."

Press officer John King told a news conference the man's identification was being withheld until his family in the United States had been notified.

King said he understands that the man's immediate family — wife and children — were with him when he was shot.

"I don't see anybody throwing Gaglardi in jail for breaking the law of the land," Strachan said, referring to the welfare minister's refusals to grant welfare to locked-out and laid-off workers.

DAY-OLD BAKERY PRODUCTS

Breadlines Stretch Food Budgets

In an attempt to stretch shrinking food budgets, the families of some locked-out and laid-off construction and mill workers are buying day-old bread at wholesale prices.

Victoria's three large wholesale bakeries routinely sell surplus products returned from retailers after a shipment of fresh baked goods is delivered.

At one Esquimalt bakery this morning 50 people waited in line for an hour to purchase bread. Most of them bought boxes of 20 loaves to keep in home freezers.

The line moved in orderly fashion. There were mostly women, but a few husbands and children stood and waited together.

Most of the families in line were bargain-hunters with freezers or large families, but some were buying bread there for the first time because they were recently out of work.

One man said he was there because he was budgeting in order to afford university tuition next fall. Another said he had been laid off from B.C. Forest Products as a result of the towboat strike.

Spokesmen at the bakeries said surplus products have been sold at discount for some time, and they denied current labor troubles had increased either surpluses or the numbers of people looking for bargains.

Retail supermarkets and groceries generally view discount sales of baked goods as competition. And bakery spokesmen explained the bulk of their trade is with retail outlets.

Surplus products "are not always available," said a spokesman for one Victoria bakery.

Civic Leaders 'Out of Touch' On St. Joseph's

By DON VIPOND

Anyone, including Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, who thinks building plans at St. Joseph's Hospital can get rolling in two weeks is out of touch.

There are too many wild and misleading statements being made on the hospital's land problems and expansion plans, the deputy chairman of the Capital regional hospital board said today.

Jim Cumming was referring to a statement from Haddock earlier this week in which the Victoria mayor is reported as saying the 150-bed extended care addition planned for St. Joseph's could go ahead in two weeks now that the city and hospital have resolved a prolongued problem over road patterns.

The fact that the hospital society and the administration of Victoria have reached an understanding which is acceptable to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark is "interesting, and certainly a step forward," said Cumming. "But it is nonsense to state the hospital could go ahead in two weeks."

It is the regional hospital district which will purchase the needed land and the Sisters of St. Ann who own the land in question.

HAVEN'T STARTED

Negotiations between these parties haven't even begun.

And even when a land deal between them is reached, the voters still have to approve by referendum spending the money, said Cumming.

"After all these things take place, then planning for the hospital can proceed . . . to state that all these things could take place in two weeks, or even in two months, is in my opinion beyond acceptance."

Cumming's statement and views expressed recently by Dr. Alex Wood, chairmen of St. Joseph's Hospital board, suggest that the procedural snags blocking the hospital's expansion are a long way from resolved.

For months it has been where roads to carry expanded traffic will go in the neighborhood of the hospital. The next issue, which could prove just as thorny, is who is going to own the land needed for expansion.

$1.5 MILLION

The land in question is the St. Ann's Academy site which the Sisters have agreed to sell for $1,500,000.

The regional hospital board is on record as holding that if it raises the money for the purchase, it must hold title.

Dr. Wood has said that would produce an unsatisfactory situation, two parties splitting ownership of a hospital. It would mean the hospital society would hold title to the hospital and the regional board to part of the land.

No Safety Precautions Planned for Death Falls

No protective measures are yet planned for the Niagara Canyon area near Goldstream, where a man fell 150 feet to his death Sunday.

No one appears to know whose responsibility such protection is.

Robert Ahrens, director of the provincial parks branch, said he can't put warning signs and fences in the area because Niagara Canyon is Greater Victoria water district land, not Goldstream Park land.

LINE NOT CLEAR

Ron Upward, commissioner of the Greater Victoria Water Board, said he won't be putting signs in the area either.

"We don't even know which part of the canyon is in the water district and which is in the parks district," Upward said.

Upward said the canyon is divided between the water board and the parks but he doesn't know where the exact boundary is.

Ahrens said the parks branch is negotiating for the Niagara canyon area.

"We're trying to negotiate an exchange of land with the water district. We would get Niagara and they would get some parks land up near Sooke Lake."

Ahrens said if the canyon does become part of Goldstream Park, fencing and signs would be put up.

"The negotiations have been going on for a long time, but we aren't getting anywhere with them," Upward said.

Ahrens said even with signs it's impossible to cover all possible sources of danger.

"You can put signs in 50 dangerous areas and someone will die in the 51st," he said.

He said the responsibility rests with the individual who must know what he's doing.

Sociologist's Study Finds Violence Key Influence

By BOB MITCHELL

Watching television is an escape into fantasy for most children, according to a study being conducted by a University of Victoria sociologist.

More than half the youngsters who filled out questionnaires for Dr. Godwin Chu said their favorite programs were those which feature violence.

"The trend is quite clear," Chu said. "Most of them watch television to get entertainment and relaxation. The things they prefer are fantasy-type programs."

The Uvic sociologist began his study about a year ago with a $2,500 Canada Council grant, and plans to wind it up early this fall.

"Our main objective is to learn about television's role in the socialization process of a child."

In the past, Chu said, three major forces shaped a child's life: family, friends and school.

Now we have a fourth, television."

On questionnaires, 337 Victoria youngsters in Grades 6, 8 and 9 were asked to rate those four influences according to importance in the following goals: how to get along with others; how to obtain knowledge; how to be a good citizen; and how to be happy.

They rated family, friends and school (in that order) as important factors in getting along, citizenship and knowledge.

As for happiness, television was rated higher than school, but not as high as family and friends.

Asked what they thought they get out of television, 51 per cent mentioned things like violence, relaxation, and entertainment. Chu interpreted this as meaning they "got their kicks" by watching TV.

Another 25 per cent said they didn't know what they get, and 20 per cent mentioned some kind of knowledge or lesson to be learned.

In answer to the question "What is done on TV that you would like to do?" 60 per cent of the survey sample named fantasy roles such as soldier, astronaut, actor or professional athlete.

Asked whether televison portrays life as it is, 30 per cent said it does, 30 per cent said it doesn't, and 36 per cent were not sure.

Program preferences ran as follows: crime and westerns, 50 per cent; comedies and cartoons, 24 per cent; family shows, 20 per cent; news and documentary, 5 per cent.

Viewing time averaged three hours per student daily, Monday to Thursday. One student said he put in about 25 hours in front of the set in that four-day period.

On weekends the average ranged from four to five hours daily.

Chu said he learned most children would rather play with friends than watch TV. But he also believes children who have poor relations with their parents are more likely to turn to television.

Chu, who studied in Taiwan for his BA and took his MA and PhD at Stanford, said his study is likely the first of its kind in Canada. Only a few like it have been undertaken elsewhere in the world.

The results will be published in a sociology journal, Chu said, but he didn't think anyone in television would be interested in them.

"People in the television industry don't listen to what the sociologists are saying," he said. "they listen to McLuhan."

He said if Canadians are concerned about side-effects of the large proportion of United States programming, limitations should be imposed.

"If you do not want people to learn those values, it would be advisable to put some limit on it."

According to guidelines set last month by the Canadian Radio and Television Commission, all stations will be required to carry 60 per cent Canadian content, effective Oct. 1, 1972.

Chu is not a TV watcher. The only show he takes in regularly is The Forsyte Saga.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Could you tell me what year Oakalla Prison Farm in Burnaby was put into operation? Also, what is the acreage?—A.W.

A. It opened in 1911 and has 200 acres.

Q. I am adopted and I wish to use my own name, the one I was given at brith, not my adopted name. Is this against the law? If not, how would I go about changing it back and what would it cost? S.L.

A. An easy answer to your question is impossible. Regulations governing changes of name for adopted persons are covered under the provincial Adoption Act and Change of Name Act. Only a lawyer can tell you what legal procedures will be necessary in your case.

Q. Could you please tell me if there is an outdoors club in Victoria, and if so, how I can join.—M.G.

A. Yes, it is called the Outdoors Club of Victoria and information on joining it can be obtained from phoning the club's chairman, Dr. John Harris, at 479-2736.

Strike Delays Pool Opening But Helps Cut Building Cost

The two-month-old construction strike will delay opening of the new Gordon Head swimming pool until next year — but also will help cut the cost of the building.

The opening will be delayed for a longer period than the strike lasts because construction schedules have been disrupted. Ald. Alan Newberry told a Saanich committee Tuesday a January or February opening now appears probable.

Cost of the pool and small meeting hall has been increased by approval of ceramic mosaic tile for the pool and environs, to replace a cement-like material originally planned. Gross cost now is pegged at $514,206.

However, the strike delay will allow the committee to invest proceeds from $400,000 in debentures issued to finance the pool. At an interest rate of 6 per cent, the committee expects to raise $8,000 in interest over a four-month period.

The total net cost — $506,206 — will be $36,000 more than the amount approved by ratepayers in a 1967 recreation referendum.

Jobless Postpone City Hall March

The 50-member Victoria Committee on Unemployment has decided to postpone its proposed march on city hall which was scheduled for today.

"We had a meeting last night and decided to postpone the march indefinitely. Our organization is still pretty new and some members felt that we should wait until the group has more people," spokesman Frank Cox said today.

Committee members had planned to march on city hall and apply for beggar's licences to dramatize the extent of unemployment in Victoria.

The group was formed by unemployed citizens to seek ways of finding jobs.

Arthur Mayse...

EARLIER THIS SPRING, the Times carried an advertisement of a most unusual sort. The party who inserted it wasn't selling anything. Instead, he offered free "a one-man re-enactment of some of the tumultuous, tragic and humorous events down through the ages" to any non-profit group that would spare him approximately 45 minutes. He supplied a telephone number, but withheld his name.

This, he explained, would be one student's way of thanking Victorians whose taxes are helping him acquire a university education.

It was an interesting ad, although one calculated to alert the skeptic. After all, life and sad experience teaches us to be wary of those who maintain that they're giving something for nothing. Anyway, just what might those humorous, tragic and tumultuous re-enactments be?

I can now report that the man behind the ad is a lean and rugged amateur actor who doubles, or more correctly triples, as a psychologist in training and the proprietor of a local business.

His name is Richard Litt, he lives at 2366 Zela Street, and he assures me that his offer can be taken at face value. His only regret is that no service club has yet seen fit to substitute his show for the standard after-lunch address.

So far, he told me, his only Victoria audience has been Canadian Council for the Blind, Victoria (White Cane Club), and that was before he ran his ad.

By this time in our conversation, I was aware that Litt is gifted with a voice of exceptional quality. But I was still in the dark about those re-enactments.

"What I've done," he explained, "is borrow certain episodes from British history. They aren't related, and I don't do them in costume."

In three-quarters of an hour, he fits himself into a considerable range of roles. He is Thomas Beckett sermonizing in Canterbury Cathedral four days before he fell victim to murder most foul.

Again, he is King James II holding forth against tobacco in terms not matched since that historic diatribe.

"As a change of pace," said Litt, who will return to Uvic for his third year next fall, "I end my show by doing Queen Victoria as a young girl the evening before her coronation.

Litt takes much of his material from plays, including those in which he has acted. He had the lead part in Victoria Theatre Guild's The Hollow Crown. Litt, then bearded, also played Beckett's chief assassin in T. S. Elliot's Murder In The Cathedral.

Married and in his forties, he is extremely earnest about the show that nobody seems to want. He's planning another series of scripts that will dramatize Canadian history, and would appreciate help from anyone with suggestions to make.

Meanwhile, he hopes that some club, society or secondary school will permit him to inject the breath of life into a few pages of the British past, as he did for White Cane Club members.

Incidentally, I'm assured by a spokesman for the group that Litt, an actor with a sense of history, really wowed 'em.

HERE'S A. NONY MOUSE, a valued if over-shy reader, with an arresting hypothesis to offer. For openers, he quotes a firm of lawn seed producers who maintain that 625 square feet of grass releases sufficient oxygen each day to meet the needs of a family of four.

Next this writer-in points out that Victoria, "because of its population density caused by apartment buildings, doesn't grow enough good grass." Hence, as he sees the matter, we're in need of a green belt to be kept so by organic fertilizers from a land-based sewage disposal plant.

"More grass-cutting would take place," he declares, "making Victorians a healthier group than less-enlightened citizens, Because this would result in perpetual photosynthesis, Victoria could really claim to be photogenic."

It's a happy scheme, except for all that grass-mowing. We're unlikely to see it emerge as a reality. But perhaps in some future of failing oxygen and close-packed population, other Victorians will!

Youthful Pro Fullback Slated to Join Royals

Victoria Royals, unbeaten in the first three matches of their first season in the Western Canada Soccer League, hope to add another English professional to their lineup before Sunday's encounter with Vancouver Cougars on the Mainland.

Dave Lawson, an 18-year-old fullback from Bedford Town of the Southern Professional League, is expected to join Royals within a week.

SHOWED PROMISE

Royals signed 16-year-old Bobby Duncan (1969 provincial soccer boy) in time for last Sunday's 4-3 victory in Seattle and the youngster showed great promise in his debut.

Although Royals tumbled Cougars 3-1 during their first meeting in Victoria on May 30, they are not counting on an easy victory this time around.

NAMED as 1970 winner of Bill Masterson Memorial Trophy by National Hockey League Writers Association today is Pit Martin (above), centre for Chicago Black Hawks. Martin edged Jim Roberts of St. Louis Blues 15-13 in voting, which goes to player adjudged best exemplifying qualities of perseverance, sportsmanship and dedication to hockey.

Pair of 100-Lap Races In Open Stocker Meet

Not one — but two!

Two 100-lap stock car races will be on tap at Western Speedway in a special open competition slated for June 20.

In making the announcement today, track manager Reg Midgley said that he expects approximatley 20 cars from Vancouver, "one or two" from Nanaimo and a few from the Oyster River Racing Association near Campbell River.

About 40 Victoria drivers will also be vying for starting positions in the two trophy dashes and two main events.

For the feature "A" main event, 24 cars will run with the first 12 cars reversed in starting order according to how fast they timed in. The last 12 cars will be lined up straight with the slowest car at the rear.

Thirty-three cars will run in the "B" main with the first 15 starting in reverse order.

The total purse is $1,500 with $50 bonus going to the car posting the fastest time.

Winner of the "A" main will rake in $170 while the "B" winner will collect $114.

Cars entered will range in age from 1949 to 1958 and must be powered by flathead six or eight cylinder engines. Overhead "sixes" are also allowed.

Time trials will begin at 7 p.m. with racing at 8.

SECOND CEASEFIRE ANNOUNCED

Jordan Rebels Cool War

ANGRY MEN out of work marched on the Legislative Buildings Tuesday demanding to see Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, both of whom were out of town. The more than 200 demonstrators were made up mainly of laid-off and locked-out tradesmen and mill workers from the Cowichan Valley and were joined by about 15 striking tugboat workers from Victoria. (Irving Strickland Photo.)

Only Food Vouchers Granted Jobless

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi has decided to grant limited assistance — food vouchers — to families made destitute by labor disputes.

The announcement that directives had been sent to welfare offices on Tuesday morning was made by deputy minister E. R. Rickinson Tuesday afternoon to leaders of more than 200 jobless men from Cowichan Valley protesting in front of the Legistive Buildings.

To qualify for the vouchers, idled workers will have to prove they are destitute and that they are ineligible for unemployment insurance, register with the federal manpower department to show there is no job for them and fill in the usual application forms for social assistance.

Rickinson stressed that only food vouchers will be issued, not cash, as is the case for most welfare recipients.

Rickinson also informed demonstration leaders, which included Robert Strachan, MLA for Cowichan-Malahat, that Gaglardi, who was out of town, would meet them Thursday at 1:30 p.m.

One of the organizers of the demonstration, Fermie Viala, vice-president of the Duncan local of the International Woodworkers of America, said they would press for full welfare assistance for workers laid-off or locked out in labor disputes.

"We want to be eligible for welfare as any other destitute person. To give us vouchers for food only, while others get welfare cheques, makes us second-class citizens," Viala said.

Viala said that he and leaders of the Carpenters Union and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada would also try to meet Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Thursday afternoon to protest B.C.'s labor laws. Peterson was out of town Tuesday afternoon.

When Viala and Strachan informed the demonstrators of the food voucher announcement, several voiced unhappiness that the protest had accomplished so little.

BETTER DO SOMETHING

"There better be a lot of cheques ready tomorrow," yelled another.

"Bring the parasites (Gaglardi and Peterson) out," demanded another.

Under the urging of the leaders, the demonstrators, still muttering, gradually broke up.

The demonstration began as a motorcade from Duncan. It stopped briefly at the Ocean Cement plant at Bamberton where Strachan met company officials and failed to persuade them to end their ban on cement sales throughout the province.

CARRY PLACARDS

The demonstrators, joined by about 15 members of the striking Canadian Merchant Service Guild at Centennial Square, then marched down Douglas Street carrying placards and gathered on the steps of the Legislative Buildings.

PROTEST JAILING

Strachan told the demonstrators they were there to protest the jailing of Capt. Arnie Davis, chief negotiator for the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, to urge humane labor laws to get the correct interpretation and use of welfare legislation and "to focus attention on the current social crisis" created by the labor disputes.

250 Young People Take Over Hotel

SASKATOON (CP) — Between 250 and 300 young people took control of the downtown Bessborough Hotel Tuesday night and served themselves beer after management closed off the taps.

It was the second demonstration at the publicly-owned Canadian National Railways hotel this week.

The demonstrators, protesting the hotel's new rulings on appearance and dress, stood on tables, taunted police and tore windows from their hinges in the barroom.

City police and RCMP were on hand but made no arrests. A police spokesman said no police action could be taken unless requested by the management.

Shortly after the young people marched on the hotel—about 8 p.m. CST — George McCabe, hotel manager, ordered the bar shut down. But the crowd, which overflowed into the lobby, helped themselves to pickled eggs, opened the beer taps and formed a beer line.

At one point a loud speaker was brought in and was used to shout insults at the hotel management.

Monday night about 200 young people invaded the beverage room and the liquor lounge after some persons were ejected for not conforming to dress regulations.

LITTLE ROOM FOR COMPROMISE

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Treasury board and postal union negotiators postponed today's scheduled bargaining meeting, saying they need more time to prepare their positions.

Spokesmen for both sides said the delay was mutually agreed on and they will meet at 10:30 a.m. Thursday rather than today. Meantime, both sides will caucus separately to prepare future bargaining strategy.

During Tuesday, when both parties met face-to-face for 2½ hours, it became clear that the government's program of wage restraint leaves treasury board and the unions with little room for a compromise.

400 Claimed Dead

By The Canadian Press

Amman radio announced this afternoon that peace has been fully restored in the Jordanian capital where government troops and Palestine Arab guerrillas have been battling for two days.

The radio interrupted regular programming to say that the fighting had completely ended and normal conditions had been re-established.

Before the announcement the United States reported that one of its diplomats was killed in Amman and a guerrilla organization said 400 persons had died in the last two days and charged that the U.S. was responsible for the clashes because it wanted to depose King Hussein.

There was new word about the fate of 32 hostages being held in an Amman hotel by the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

The organization had announced it would not be responsible for the lives of the Americans, Britons and West Germans if Jordanian forces continued to shell Palestine refugee camps.

KILLED IN CROSS-FIRE

The United States government announced that Maj. Robert P. Perry, 34, assistant army attache in the U.S. Embassy in Amman, was killed in cross-fire in his home.

Travellers arriving in Beirut, Lebanon, said that commandos burst into Perry's house and killed him with a burst of automatic weapon fire.

The voice of Asifa, the Cairo-based radio of Al Fatah, the largest of the commando organizations, charged that a U.S. plot to put Crown Prince Hassan in place of his brother, King Hussein, was the cause of the clashes in Amman.

The radio also said that more than 400 persons have been killed in and around Amman in the last two days.

Two American correspondents reached Beirut after getting out of the hotel where the hostages were being held.

Jesse Lewis of the Washington Post, who managed to get out of the hotel undetected with Bill Tuohy of the Los Angeles Times, said the remaining hostages were well and unharmed.

Towboat Men Vote on Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Some 400 west coast towboats and their 1,150 officers and engineers could be back at work early next week if a contract settlement endorsed by union negotiators is accepted by the membership.

Result of voting by the members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild on the offer, reported to be 26 per cent over 2½ years, is expected by Friday night.

Federal mediator William Kelly said the settlement will bring about "major improvements in the working conditions of the towboat men."

"It will drastically reduce the hours of duty required of the masters and officers which have been bitterly complained about."

Provision of a minimum six-man crew on all large, continuously-operating tugs, which at one time was a main union demand, is believed not included in the offer.

DISPUTE HEARD

Meanwhile, a conciliation board is hearing a dispute between the British Columbia Towboat Owners Association, which represents 53 companies, and the Seafarers International Union which has 250 members working on the tugs.

The association said Tuesday, however, that the SIU "generally goes along with what the guild gets." Current guild pay rates range from $583 a month for the mate of a small tug to $980 for the captain of a large one.

Increases for these categories will range from $170 a month to $268. New regulations, covering most of the bitterly-fought safety issues including design and construction of the boats, accommodation and work practices, are to be announced in the Commons today by Transport Minister Don Jamieson.

In another development, an appeal was launched Tuesday against the six-month jail sentence imposed on chief guild negotiator Capt. Arnie Davis last Thursday for contempt of a B.C. supreme court injunction banning picketing.

The appeal claimed that the contempt order didn't state whether proceedings were criminal or civil, didn't disclose whether any rules applied to the proceedings and that it was made ex parte, in the absence of Capt. Davis.

20,000 JOBLESS

The strike which started May 3 has thrown out of work 20,000 men in the forest industry, either through layoffs because of lack of raw materials usually handled by tugs, or because they refuse to cross towboat picket lines.

It followed nine months of negotiations and rejection of a 21 per cent pay increase over three years. A secret DOT report leaked to the press by the guild stated 80 per cent of

NORTH VIETS CAPTURE KEY TOWN

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — North Vietnamese troops have occupied the last major government-controlled town in southern Laos, informed sources said today.

They said the North Vietnamese captured the key town of Saravane Tuesday.

Showdown Vote Set Over War

Times News Services

The U.S. Senate today is preparing for a showdown vote Thursday on a Nixon-backed resolution which would allow President Nixon, without approval of the U.S. Congress, to send troops back into Cambodia after the July 1 deadline.

A close vote is expected and the administration believes it has the support to pass the resolution.

Sens. Mike Mansfield (D — Mont.), Frank Church (D — Idaho) and John Sherman Cooper (R — Ky.) called the administration-backed move the equivalent of a new "Gulf of Tonkin Resolution" which would allow the president to take any war action in Cambodia he wishes and would nullify the Cooper-Church amendment. The latter denies funds for further U.S. operations in Cambodia after July 1 without the prior consent of Congress.

On the war front, Cambodian troops pushed back North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops from around the provincial capital of Siem Reap, 185 miles northwest of Phnom Penh.

'MUST LOWER EXCESSIVE COSTS'

Basford Vows Drug Action

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford hinted today at direct federal intervention to bring down retail drug prices if co-operative efforts with the provinces fail to work.

"However unpleasant it might be to intervene more directly in the market place, it may prove necessary, in order to meet the paramount objective—lowering of excessive costs," he said.

"Needless to say it would be preferable to cure the ills of the market place through voluntary co-operation, imaginative streamlining of techniques and broad competitive forces."

Mr. Basford made the statements at a closed meeting of federal and provincial government officials. A text of his statement was distributed outside the meeting.

"I am convinced that the level of prices for prescription drugs is too high," he said in reporting on a just-concluded survey in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

BASFORD
. . . down or else

Mr. Basford said the survey of 19 commonly prescribed drugs at 10 drugstores in each city shows "that more competitive practices could lead to significant reductions in prices."

He said the consumer affairs department will maintain close scrutiny over price movements through industry price lists as well as through existing statistical indexes.

Mr. Basford told the meeting that recent steps to weaken patent protection enjoyed by some drugs had resulted in remarkable results in lowering drug prices.

The federal patent commissioner had issued licences to im-

Trudeau Aide Leads Exodus

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Gordon Gibson, of Vancouver, executive assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau, is at the head of a parade of several executive assistants, special assistants and other staff people planning to leave the government service this summer.

The departures — 10 in number according to latest count — have given rise to rumors that there is some unhappiness behind the scenes in the executive suites on Parliament Hill.

The rumors reached the floor of the Commons Tuesday when G. W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) asked: "Would the prime minister make a statement in connection with the alleged resignation of seven ministerial assistants because of the autocratic rule of the prime minister?"

Opposition members banged their desks in applause. Last year Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield's office who decided they had served long enough on Parliament Hill and resigned to take other posts in private business.

At the time the Liberals asked questions in the House about "trouble" in the opposition leaders' office.

In addition to Gibson, who has told many people in Ottawa that he plans to leave the prime minister's staff this summer, James Wightman of the prime minister's press office, is understood to be planning a move.

Both Gibson and Wightman have been with the prime minister since he was elected to that office. Wightman served as a press officer with former prime minister L. B. Pearson.

Among the executive assistants and special assistants planning to leave this summer are Robert McDowell, special assistant to services and supply minister James Richardson of Winnipeg; Tom Brett, executive assistant to government leader in the Senate, Paul Martin; Richard Hayes, executive assistant to Justice Minister John Turner; Blair William and Michael Barry, assistants to Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson; and Robert Wong, special assistant to Health and Welfare Minister John Munro.

One such drug, diazepam, a tranquillizer, now was being quoted at a suggested retail price 30 per cent below a competitor.

He said he is told that for another tranquillizer, chlordiazepoxide, a similar sharp reduction took place. One drug industry estimate was that hospitals and governments would be saved $950,000 a year as a result of price competition in this drug alone.

Mr. Basford said the federal government's role in dealing with the high cost of retail drug distribution is mainly that of a catalyst.

But, if any part of the federal program "fails to measure up to expectations, either through inadequacy or lack of support, other steps must be contemplated."

He followed this remark with a reference to direct intervention. He said the federal combines investigation branch has a role in maintaining competitive practices. The consumers branch would facilitate competition by informing consumers.

"It is our intention to foster the greatest possible degree of competition consistent with the highest standards of health care and physical safety."

Japanese Smelter Proposal Seen

Mines Minister Frank Richter expects Japanese interests to propose a copper smelter for B.C. within two months but he isn't sure it will meet the province's pollution control standards.

Interviewed on his return from Japan, Richter said he received inquiries about establishment of a smelter from a Japanese consortium.

"The question of pollution control may be a very substantial factor on which a decision will finally be made," he said, adding that a meeting here with the Japanese interests may take place before long.

POLLUTION FACTOR

Premier Bennett said last week that the province is still seeking establishment of a smelter but will only approve one if pollution standards are met.

Richter, who stayed over in Japan after attending Osaka Fair ceremonies with Bennett, was asked about rumors of new oil drilling applications in Georgia Strait.

"No applications have been received from any company," he said, suggesting the oil industry is "looking for safer bets" right now.

DAVIS WARNING

He said the warning by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis that Ottawa will not allow drilling in the strait does not appear to have been a major factor in the lack of interest by oil companies.

Drilling in coastal waters generally as well as the strait appears to be "a dead issue" right now, he said.

Europe Trip Follows Retirement

After 46 years in the newspaper business, compositor William Mason, 2369 Musgrave in Oak Bay, has retired.

He left Tuesday on a six-week vacation in Europe with his wife, Nora.

He started work as a reporter with the Colonist at the age of 17, earning the princely sum of $15 a week.

Better pay in the printing department made Mason decide on a change. After completing his apprenticeship, he left in 1932 to travel in the United States.

After a stint in the printing shop of the Detroit Times, he returned to Victoria, in 1928, signing on with the Victoria Times.

When the Times and the Colonist amalgamated in 1951, becoming Victoria Press Ltd., Mason remained on staff, working with both papers.

He was presented with a camera by his fellow workers.

THE WEATHER

There will be sunshine for Victorians Thursday. The weather office at Victoria International Airport also forecast southwesterly winds at 15 m.p.h. or less.

Temperatures are expected to reach an overnight low of 45 with a high of 62 Thursday. But they may reach 65 or 70 in areas protected from the wind.

Weather statistics are on Page 31.

Driver Jailed, Cabbie Hurt in Flaming Crash

Bruce Lief Erikson, 26, of Vancouver, was sentenced to 14 days in prison and had his licence suspended for a year in provincial court this morning.

Erikson was charged with dangerous driving Tuesday night following a flaming two-car collision at the intersection of Quadra and Fort at 11:30 p.m.

Eriskon pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler on the Criminal Code charge. He admitted to police after the crash that he ran a red light while travelling up Fort Street at about 45 miles per hour.

HIT HYDRANT

His car was in collision with a taxi, and after impact the vehicles spun across the intersection, bending a steel traffic signal post and shearing off a fire hydrant.

The taxi burst into flames immediately after the collision, but quick work by passers-by got victims out of the wreckage and around a corner, away from the flames.

Eleanor Kairez, 19, of 3335 Midland, Oak Bay, a passenger in Baker's taxi, was treated for leg cuts and released from Royal Jubilee Hospital.

An unidentified passenger in Erikson's car was unhurt.

'BEAT LIGHT'

Police reported Erikson told them he knew the light was red but that he though "he could beat the light and the other car."

"That sort of horsing around can lead to a person's death," Ostler told Erikson before passing sentence.

City police were assisted by two fire trucks, two ambulances and city waterworks and engineers staff.

Builders Ask Easing Of Rules

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — The president of the National Home Builders' Association said Tuesday his group could build houses which people earning $3,000 annually could afford to buy.

Eric Johnston of Toronto told a group of home builders and politicians the high cost of housing is the result of costly and unnecessary government restrictions.

"There are thousands of dollars in the cost of a home which have nothing to do with materials or labor. On a $13,000 home, for instance, there is $1,000 in sales tax alone."

Other expenses, he told a special meeting of the St. Catharines Home Builders' Association, stem from such planning restrictions as requirements for sidewalks, underground hydro and paved private driveways.

"The standard of housing in Canada is inferior to none in the world but we have that standard at a price — four-fifths of our people can't afford housing."

He challenged all levels of government to let the association build a demonstration project with all restrictions lifted.

"We will house 1,250,000 more Canadians at no extra cost to governments if they will let us show them how," he said.

The NDP member said that Davis was jailed six months for what the courts had decided was secondary picketing. But, he said, the manager of Ocean Cement that morning had admitted to him in essence that they were doing a secondary boycott.

"While labor is penalized by the courts for secondary picketing, management is allowed to get away with the same thing without hindrance.

"I don't see anybody throwing Gaglardi in jail for breaking the law of the land," Strachan said, referring to the welfare minister's refusals to grant welfare to locked-out and laid-off workers.

Jogging Kills Two

MANILA (AP) — A 34-year-old veteran of the Manila police force collapsed and died Monday after an hour of jogging. His was the second death blamed on the physical fitness program Mayor Antonio Villegas started May 11 for the force. The jogger, 59-year-old Detective Sgt. Antonio Gomez, died of heart failure, the police department said. It blamed his death on the daily exercise.

Ex-President Dies

SAN JOSE (Reuters) — Former Costa Rica president Rafael Angel Calderon Guardia died after a two-month illness. He was 72. Calderon, president from 1944-48, was also head of the opposition Republican party.

In another long-standing dispute, the Construction Labor Relations Association said Tuesday night it will appeal a court decision which denied it an injunction killing a contract signed by a member firm with the plumbers union.

Atlas Installations Ltd. signed a contract after the CLRA locked out the plumbers and eight other construction unions in April, while a 10th union struck. More than 10,000 workers have been idled.

NO BARGAINING

The company said it signed on its own because there was no "true collective bargaining" between the 630-member CLRA and the unions and Atlas was threatened with bankruptcy.

Two hotels whose waitresses and bartenders struck Monday continuted to operate with non-union labor crossing picket lines. Forty-five other hotels in the Lower Mainland and Fraser Valley, excluding Vancouver, have served lockout notice effective 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

Festival Reports $500 Profit

The Greater Victoria Music Festival ended up $500 in the black after spending $9,916 in 1970, the treasurer reported to the annual meeting of the festival association Tuesday.

And it will begin its new year with $1,249 in the bank compared with just $777 a year ago.

It had been a good year but "we must not relax our efforts or be over optimistic" warned Walter Kitley in his presidential report.

He told the well-attended meeting at the Conservatory of Music that cost of running the festival would inevitably rise in 1971 with the necessity of bringing in more adjudicators to cope with big classes and rental of additional halls.

ELECTED

The following executive and board of directors was elected for the ensuing year.

Mrs. William Ellis, honorary president; Walter Kitley, president; Mrs. V. Berringer, past president; Philip Kitley, vice-president; Mrs. Marjorie Kitley, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary Saich, recording secretary; Dr. J. F. K. English, treasurer; Mrs. Ada English, festival secretary.
